AVOID EGG SUBSTITUTES.

The great war in which the nations of the earth are now engaged, our own country among them, has imposed a great many new duties upon the Dairy and Food Bureau and given its chief and the various employes many things to consider and some novel problems to solve. This is true of every department of human activity in this and other lands.

The householder has likewise questions of considerable difficulty to consider. The urgent necessity for food conservation, the growing cost of the necessities of life, the fact that a dollar goes no farther now than sixty cents did a few years ago, all these things annoy and perplex. Our country is confronted by conditions that never before existed in the northern states and only in the south during the civil war.

The fact that eggs have been scarce and high-priced has led certain enterprising and often unscrupulous persons to engage in the manufacture of various egg substitutes. These are advertised in such a way as to lead the housekeeper to believe that they are admirable substitutes for eggs. As a result she buys them and undertakes to provide palatable food for her family by their assistance. It is not her fault if she achieves signal failure.

The Bulletin advises the housewives of the state that these egg substitutes are fakes pure and simple. They contain not a trace of egg, but are coal tar products, made to resemble the color of eggs. They cannot be successfully employed instead of eggs in the ordinary processes of cooking and baking, for the only way in which they resemble eggs is in the color. To purchase them is to delude yourself and do harm to the stomach of the members of your family.

The Dairy and Food Commissioner has directed the agents of the bureau in various counties to purchase samples of these egg substitutes. They have been analyzed by the bureau's chemists and in every instance have been found to be innocent of egg but rich in poisonous coal tar dyes. The careful housewife has no desire to feed such stuff to her husband and children; when she has done so it was in ignorance of the actual composition of the substitute. Having been informed it is to be hoped she will avoid these articles not only because they are not really egg substitutes, but also because they contain no food value and are actually injurious to the consumer.

CONCERNING OUR GARDENS.

The country has a right to look for the loyal support of all classes during the existing distress. In the matter of the production of food it is the urgent duty of the farming population to exert every effort to increase the yield to the utmost extent. Individual gardens are likewise among the most urgent necessities of the present year. Not only the farmers and the market gardeners are looked to for the greatest possible increase in products; the man who owns only a small garden plot must utilize every inch of it if he wishes to have the approval of his conscience. School gardens must be more numerous than ever before. Boys and girls must interest themselves in the cultivation of the soil. Everybody must do the best possible to feed this country and also to provide a large surplus for others.

Some folks who live in big cities have been saying sarcastic things about the farmers of the country. They say the farmers have manifested little or no enthusiasm about the two Liberty Bond loans that have been negotiated. They accuse them of selfishness and of greed, of hoarding their crops in anticipation of higher prices and of refusing to plant as many acres as they might have done out of fear that bumper crops would result in a decided lowering of prices. The probability is that the talkers are really without knowledge, as too many chronic critics are. As the farmers and gardeners are at the very head of the useful folks in this country, it seems scarcely likely that they are guilty of the charges made against them by persons who never yet made two grains of wheat grow where one had grown before. At least we do not propose to believe the charge without evidence.

Whatever may have been true in the past it is surely up to all cultivators of the ground to do their level best during the season now at hand. We all believe in the righteousness of the cause supported by the United States and in the vital importance that success shall crown that cause. It is as much the duty of the tillers of the ground to produce the largest possible crops as it is for the men in khaki to employ every ounce of energy they possess to win the war for freedom. The farmers of Pennsylvania understand this as clearly as others comprehend their duty, and everybody who loves the cause of free government likewise understands by this time that the words opportunity and duty are synonymous.

SUBSTITUTE FOODS, FICTITIOUS AND OTHERWISE.

Egg Substitutes.

A paper read before the meeting of Central Atlantic States Food Officials Association, at Hotel Adelphia, Philadelphia,

By CHARLES H. LaWALL.

By far the most important class of substitutes on the market at the present time is that of egg substitutes. They all contain the elements of fraud and deception. They cannot and do not replace eggs as regards food value, although most of them inferentially make such claims. The presence of yellow coloring matter is for the purely fraudulent and deceptive purpose of making the articles prepared by their use possess the appearance of egg richness.

Several of the substitutes claim to contain dried egg, but the majority of them are made up of constituents bearing absolutely no relation to the normal constituents of egg.

In addition to this, the amount directed to be used makes the nutritive value ridiculously low in comparison with egg. An egg will range in food producing value from 75 to 100 calories. No egg substitute has yet been seen that contains more than 15 calories to the level teaspoonful, and while a 25 cent package is usually advertised as being equivalent to from 3 to 5 dozen eggs, the best of them is not actually equal to one dozen eggs in nutritive value and some are only half of this, so the economy is not apparent, especially considering the fact that the constituents of many of them can be duplicated in most households at much lower cost.

If the sale of this class of products is allowed to go on uncontrolled, the American public will be defrauded of much money that should go for foods of known composition and high nutritive value.

Butter Mergers.

The so-called "butter mergers," sometimes called "butter extenders," but more often offered under the name of "butter making machines," are devices made on the principle of a churn, by the use of which it is possible to take a pound of butter and a pint of milk and turn out what appears to be 2 lbs. of butter.

The product is not butter, but butter mixed with milk, as anyone with common sense ought to know. It therefore contains nearly 40% of water instead of not more than 16%, as is required by law. There is just as much sense in thinning one's syrup, weakening one's tea or coffee or watering one's milk, as there is in making a diluted product that looks like butter, unless one expects to eat twice as much of it as of the real butter, and in that case the economy has disappeared.

Foreign Fats in Ice Cream and Similar Products.

The use of an instrument known as the homogenizer, which has for its object the making of a more perfect emulsion of milk or cream and at the same time, if desired, incorporating either butter or some foreign fat to increase the richness, has made it possible for manufacturers of ice cream to add foreign fats to skim milk, thus making a substitute cream, the use of which would not ordinarily be detected except by close chemical analysis. It is believed that the reputability of most ice cream manufacturers has prevented this form of adulteration from becoming more prevalent, but that it does exist has been shown on several occasions by the finding of cocoanut oil in ice cream in several parts of the country. There is nothing harmful about this adulteration; it is just plain fraud.

Cream in Restaurants and Drug Stores.

Most restaurants list upon their menus "cream" with coffee, cereals, fruit, etc. Many pharmacies advertise vanilla "cream" or other "cream" combinations of soda water. In both of these classes of places there is a growing tendency to substitute condensed milk for cream. This is a fraud and deception, for while condensed milk possesses the thickness and body of cream and would deceive the majority of patrons, its nutritive value is far below that of cream. Here, again, it is the pocketbook that is injured rather than the health.

Imitation Lard.

While this is a product of acknowledged wholesomeness the fact that it is a cheaper substitute for a well known food has led to the passage of laws providing for its proper marking and declaration to the consumer, so that no deception can occur. These regulatory laws are frequently violated and much of the substitute lard is sold as and for lard itself.

Bottled Soda Waters.

This class of products is difficult with which to deal. The majority of them are imitations, both in flavor and color, but bear no other warning to the consumer than that contained upon the crown stopper, which is naturally removed and not seen at all when the drink is served to be consumed where sold and not carried away.

In connection with this class of products, the careless and indiscriminate use of the terms "imitation," "artificial" and "synthetic," as well as of the ambiguous and misleading word "compound," should be controlled by specific regulation or law.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN FOOD SAVING AND PARSIMONY.

From Simmons' Spice Mill.

In regard to food saving the people in general, considering that there are 100,000,000 in the country, not only mean right but do right in most essential things. One misunderstanding, however, constantly crops up, namely, the idea that food saving means thrift, in the sense of parsimony. Patched clothes, retrenchment in expenditure and even niggardliness in diet are often advocated under the impression that food saving is thereby helped; and many well-meaning persons still judge the success of food administration by the index of price, believing that conservation means cheapness. The main fact of food saving is, of course, the one which we started to reserve for shipment to our allies enough concentrated foodstuffs to keep them fed and fighting, even though it costs us some money. Thrift enters into food saving, but not in the personal, penny-pinching economics that so many persons mistake for thrift. The food saving program is steadily developing economics, such as elimination of waste in growing, shipping and distributing foodstuffs, the correction of uneconomic habits, the suppression of hoarding and speculation, and a universal whole-hearted investigation of costs in every industry and trade for the purpose of setting right methods that have long been wrong. Mistaken ideas of thrift hurt food saving in two ways: First, people are apt to say: "What is the Use?" and assume that we are not succeeding in the food program if they cannot discern definite reductions in living expenses. Actually the reductions are often there as a direct result of food control; but, even if they were not, this is an unfair measure of food saving. Secondly, the false thrift which leads to parsimony in expenditure for necessities is most disturbing to the purchasing and distributing industries of the country at a time when they are passing through a crisis and, in the end, results in no actual saving; for parsimony simply means deprivation today which must be offset tomorrow by heavier expenditures for the basic essentials of life and worse than that, perhaps, to make good a slipping back in health or in living standards.

FRANCE TO SUPPLY CANNED GOODS.

An agreement has been concluded between the French government by which the canned fruit and vegetables required by the American Expeditionary forces will be supplied by France.

This action was taken after a joint investigation by experts of the United States Army Purchasing Board and French authorities showed that the normal fruit and vegetable crop in France was sufficient to supply both armies as well as all domestic needs.

The Americans will be required only to import sugar for preserving the fruit and tinplate for the manufacture of cans. These materials will be sold to the French government which will apportion them among private manufacturers.

The American Purchasing Board expects that by purchasing the canned goods in France there will be a saving of 70 per cent. on the tonnage required for canned goods. The monthly canned food requirements for 25,000 men is estimated at 350 tons. Fifty tons of this represents sugar and tinplate which will be imported, thus saving 300 tons of shipping space. For an army of 500,000 men the saving would amount to 6,000 tons monthly. Products for canning will be purchased at reasonable prices to be fixed by the French government.

The quantity of canned tomatoes consumed by the American soldiers greatly exceeds the proportionate amount used by the other allied armies and the French civilian population. It may be necessary, therefore, to import some tomatoes from Italy.

PRICES OF SEVENTY YEARS AGO.

A. A. Fales, ex-president of the Boston Retail Grocers Association, has in his possession an old journal or day book kept in 1847 by his grandfather, Elisha Fales, who for many years conducted a general store at Cushing, Me.

The store sold groceries, dry goods, cordwood, hardware, liquor, shoes and patent medicine. The money value of a dollar was far greater than today, and prices of bulk commodities were in most cases lower than now, although there were some exceptions.

Molasses was much more popular than today, nearly every page containing one or more entries. Molasses usually sold at 30 cents a gallon. There are numerous entries of sales of tobacco by the pound and flour by the barrel. Tea was 30 cents a pound, while flour ranged from $6.75 to $7.50 per barrel, a high price, when one considers the great purchasing power of money, it being a time when able-bodied men would work all day in the country for a few cents a day. Brooms sold at 25 cents, rice was 5 to 6 cents a pound and coffee varied from 9 to 14 cents. Salt pork was sold at 10 cents a pound and eggs were 10 to 12 cents a dozen, and butter from 14 to 16 cents a pound. Forty pounds of fish, probably salt cod, sold for 80 cents, or 2 cents a pound. Cheese varied from 10 to 15 cents a pound. Candles were in considerable demand, the price being 15 cents a pound. Raisins were 10 cents. Flour was almost wholly sold by the barrel, some customers buying two barrels at a time, while salt pork was usually sold in quantities of five to twelve pounds at once. Vinegar was invariably sold by the gallon.

PLENTY OF SALT.

That the reports that there is a general shortage of salt in the United States have no foundation in fact is shown by the following statement made by the United States Geological Survey: Estimates of the production in 1917, compiled by R. W. Stone, show a total of more than 6,946,000 short tons, an increase of 583,000 tons, or 9 per cent. over the production in 1916. As the largest domestic consumption on record, that of 1916, was less than 6,500,000 tons, and as the imports of 1916 were less than 2 per cent. of the total consumption, it is evident that the country is in no way dependent on a foreign supply for its salt, for the domestic production is ample. Any local or temporary shortage that may have occurred in the last few weeks of 1917 was due mainly to congestion of freight.

The increase in production was induced by higher prices and brisk demand and was made in spite of unfavorable conditions at some plants. Shortage of labor, difficulty of obtaining fuel and an inadequate supply of freight cars are given as the reasons why some plants did not make an even larger increase.

So far as the raw material is concerned this country is blessed with a practically unlimited supply of salt. From the rock salt mines and brine wells of New York to the solar evaporation plants that get salt from sea water in San Francisco Bay, from the abundance in Michigan to the superabundance in Louisiana and Texas, where rock salt occurs in deposits 2,000 to 3,000 feet thick, there is salt in quantity beyond comprehension. So long as labor and fuel are plentiful and cars are furnished to transport the product the salt producers of the United States can supply all our needs.

COTTAGE CHEESE PRODUCTION BOOSTED.

Nine agents of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture worked last summer to induce creameries to collect and save skim milk, formerly fed to animals or wasted, and to manufacture it into cottage cheese or condensed skimmilk, a wholesome substitute for milk.

To September 30 the following results were accomplished by the nine men:

Total quantity of skimmilk saved (pounds) 15,640,000, (approximate).

Cottage cheese or its equivalent in the form of condensed skimmilk (pounds) 2,606,000.

Equivalent in food value to meat (pounds) 2,606,000.

Quantity of meat which would have been produced if this milk had been fed to hogs (pounds), 752,000.

Total saved by using this as cottage cheese or condensed skimmilk instead of using it as hog feed, equivalent to (pounds) 1,854,000.

Total cost of the work done by the field men, $10,500.

Quantity of cottage cheese or its equivalent in condensed skimmilk saved for each dollar the department expended (pounds), 248.

Quantity of meat saved for each dollar expended (pounds), 248.

These figures are based on actual quantities of cottage cheese manufactured through the efforts of the nine agents in four months.

Personal instructions were given to creamery operators who were willing to undertake to save the by-products. There is no doubt but that the creameries will continue the manufacture of cottage cheese and that others will join in the production of the meat substitutes.

STIMULATING QUALITIES OF MILK.

One of the most recent discoveries of the Pasteur Institute of Paris has to do with the stimulating qualities of milk, says the Produce Review. While milk has always been considered an excellent tonic, and known to be exceptionally rich in food value it was not until the Pasteur Institute conducted a number of conclusive experiments that the stimulus in milk became a known quantity. For a number of months milk has been given the French soldiers in the trenches and to many of them it has been the one and only stimulant. The effect which the milk has produced has more than justified the claims which the Institute has made for it.

It is claimed that the stimulating effect of milk is especially notable when given to soldiers just before a big battle or a dangerous charge, and also when administered to the troops when in great fatigue. The advantage of the milk stimulus over the alcohol stimulus so extensively advocated in previous years is that there are no bad after effects, and the keenness of the senses is in nowise impaired nor the coolness of the judgment affected.

The knowledge that milk is a stimulant of no mean force will come as something of a shock to those who have hitherto considered it synonymous with all things mild and peaceful. It is somewhat difficult to believe that the chief product of the patient and the gentle cow should contain such an element of forceful stimulation. But as proof of the contention we have the word of the world's greatest research institute, backed up by conclusive experiments in a place where stimulation of the most effective sort is needed.

FISH FLAVOR IN MILK PRODUCTS.

The fish flavor observed sometimes in milk, and frequently in butter, has been the subject of a great deal of investigation, says the Scientific American, but its origin has remained obscure. The evidence has heretofore been against bacteria being the direct cause of the trouble, and has indicated that changes in the product favored by high acidity and the presence of oxygen was responsible for the objectionable flavor. O'Callaghan attributed the trouble to oidium lactis. Weigmann considered that fishiness might develop from abnormal working and sometimes from the use of salt high in magnesium. Several experiments have indicated that specimens of fishy butter would not communicate their flavor to good butter placed in contact with them. There has been conflicting evidence as to whether the flavor occurred in unsalted as well as salted butter. The latest contribution to this vexed question has been recently made by B. W. Hammer, dairy bacteriologist at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment station. From a can of evaporated milk that had developed a fishy odor he isolated an organism that was capable of producing fishiness in milk into which it was inoculated. In milk so inoculated there was, besides the development of the fishy odor, a coagulation and a rapid digestion. The organism, however, did not produce fishiness when inoculated into butter, either directly or into pasteurized or sterilized cream, before churning. The organism which appears to be closely related to the Proteus group has been named Bac. icthyosmium.

NINE REASONS FOR MILK RECORDS.

According to the Louisiana State University, there are nine convincing reasons for keeping records of dairy cows.

1. They enable the dairyman to feed each cow according to the quantity of milk she produces.

2. They form the only basis on which a dairy herd can be improved. The time is here when no dairyman will buy a herd bull whose dam does not have an authentic record showing creditable milk and butterfat production.

3. Records alone will sell cows when no other quality will. Grade cows with records can be sold for from 25 to 50 per cent. more than those without records.

4. A system of records is the first step in building up a herd. The unprofitable cows are the most expensive. Their heifer calves are usually low producers and should not be raised.

5. Records stimulate better feeding and breeding. The dairyman who keeps records usually keeps a balanced ration, and becomes interested in winter dairying, which has numerous advantages over breeding cows to freshen in the spring.

6. The weighing of the feed and milk keeps the owner in close touch with the daily condition of each cow.

7. Records stimulate better milking. Milk scales serve as a check on the milker, and induce him to milk the cows more thoroughly than when the milk is not weighed.

8. A knowledge of what each animal is doing develops personal pride and interest in the herd.

9. Finally, records make dairying a business proposition, and in various incidental ways means more money to the man who milks.

EFFECT OF PASTEURIZATION.

In an address, President F. J. Mess, of the Washington Dairymen's Association, inquires as to the effect that pasteurization of milk may have on the growth promoting factors found in milk. Dr. McCollum makes the following reply in Hoard's Dairyman:

"The question regarding the loss of nutritive value of milk during pasteurization is one phase of the general question of the possible deterioration of the quality of foods during cooking, processing of canned foods, and pasteurization of milk.

"It is true that many physicians have held the view that pasteurized milk is not suitable for infant feeding, while many others believe that milk is rendered so much more safe, especially if its bacterial count is high, that pasteurization is desirable. There are still other physicians of wide experience who advocate feeding boiled milk. The explanation of these divergent views is, I believe, clear and is largely through the observations of Dr. Alfred H. Hess of New York City. He has tried pasteurized milk fed to infants immediately after pasteurization, to others milk fed 24 to 48 hours after pasteurization, and to others milk which had been heated to boiling. His extensive experience with human infants supports the view that they may grow well on fresh, pasteurized or boiled milk. There is danger in feeding milk which has been kept 24 hours or more after pasteurization, but not otherwise. The reason for this is clear. Milk always contains lactic acid forming bacteria and these develop steadily from the time the milk is drawn. The formation of lactic acid checks the multiplication of other and injurious kinds of bacteria. Pasteurization destroys most of the lactic acid formers and permits the growth of the dangerous types of organisms. If sufficient time is given these multiply after pasteurization, the milk is dangerous to the health of infants and may cause scurvy.

The pasteurization of milk or heating it to the boiling point does not cause deterioration of the growth-promoting power of milk through destruction of the so-called "vitamines," a term which should no longer be used. There are only two unknown dietary essentials in milk and other foods. These I have named fat soluable A and water soluable B until we know more of their chemical properties. Fat soluable A is mostly in the fat and water soluable B in the non-fat portion of the milk. In neutral or acid reaction both of these substances are stable toward heat and are not readily destroyed by heating.

"What has been said about milk can be said also about cooked foods, or processed canned foods. The temperature reached in these processes is not high enough to destroy the unidentified food essentials. Drying by the ordinary process does not cause any appreciable deterioration in the quality of foods so far as experimental evidence can indicate."

MILK STILL CHEAPEST FOOD.

Milk at present prices is the cheapest animal food that the public can buy. It is cheaper than beef, pork, poultry or mutton. Two quarts of milk furnish more nutriment than one pound of meat. Therefore, milk even at 20 or 25 cents a quart would be cheaper than meat, and the intelligent, fair-minded consumer who knows these facts will not only gladly pay the present fair prices for milk, but will use milk more liberally.

If the dairymen cannot get a price for their product at which there is a reasonable profit they may sell their herds to the butcher and engage in raising wheat, the price of which has been fixed at a profitable point. Then the public will be obliged to pay double or treble today's prices for milk if they can get it.

This is not an idle statement. Ask the government authorities and they will tell you that milk cows the past year have been slaughtered by the thousands because it was said to be unprofitable to milk them at the previous prices of milk.

Investigations have shown that the cost of grain feed is responsible for only one-fourth of the increased cost of milk.

Live stock, especially dairy cows, should be fed upon the by-products of cereal manufacture, after the human food has been largely utilized, supplemented by home-grown roughage, silage and pasturage when economically available. — American Feed Manufacturers' Association.

BREEDING A POTATO CALAMITY.

From the Grocers' Review.

The potato marketing situation at this moment (March) appears to be serious, according to a statement issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The total production in 1917 is estimated to have been 442,536,000 bushels, or the largest crop ever produced in the United States. Notwithstanding this fact, prices from the time of digging to the present have ruled higher than in any previous year of which there is record, with the exception of last year, when the crop was abnormally short.

Prices at point of production have generally declined since digging began and many dealers are reputed to hold large stocks, due to a poor guess, purchased at prices higher than those now prevailing. This may account in some measure for the present slow rate of movement out of some of the heaviest producing areas and for the abnormally wide difference between present wholesale prices to the grower and retail prices to the customer.

Under existing and prospective conditions no material quantity of potatoes can be exported or be converted into non-perishable products this season. The crop cannot be carried over. It must be consumed or wasted. The food situation throughout the world demands that it be consumed effectively to relieve the existing strain on the supply of cereals. It is the one great food resource of the world upon which there is now danger of a heavy loss and the Department is of the opinion that the situation demands that the farmers sell freely; that the large dealers move their stocks rapidly, and that the retailer urge volume of sales with the smallest possible margin of profit, realizing that he is now the most important factor in speeding up potato consumption.

TEA AND COFFEE FOOD SAVING.

A war-time study of the tea, coffee and spice market has been made by the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal for the Commercial Economy board of the Council of National Defense. Tea, coffee and spices can be used to make all dishes palatable, encouraging the use of substitute foods, and the saving of staples which we must send to our allies. Moreover, wise use of these articles will help relieve shipping congestion on the ocean and on our railroads. Merchants are urged to co-operate in eliminating waste in handling tea, coffee and spices.

The following suggestions are made to housewives who buy coffee:

1. Buy your coffee in the bean.

2. In making up a blend it is better to substitute for Java and Mocha mild coffees from Central and South America and blend them with the Santos or Bourbon Santos from Brazil, in order to reduce cost. Most package and bulk blends are now made up in this fashion.

3. Bulk coffees purchased from a reliable dealer are likely to prove more satisfactory than many package coffees, unless they are put up by houses of known standing and responsibility.

4. In purchasing bulk coffees it is well to remember that a full roast will produce better color in the cup.

CHEESE FACTS FOR GROCERS.

Several thousand factories in this country make American cheese, sometimes called cheddar, or ordinary cheese, says J. L. Sammis in the Creamery Journal. This is the type of cheese most commonly made and sold in the United States and can be marketed when only from three days to one week old. Well made American cheese of good quality can also be put into cold storage and kept six months or more. As practically all grocers handle American cheese, it is most easily marketed. Swiss, limburger and brick cheese must be kept in curing rooms at the cheese factory for several weeks, or even months, before they are ready to be sold or shipped. Swiss cheese of better quality, which requires several months to cure, sells at a higher price. Farmers must bring their milk to the Swiss cheese factory both morning and night while it is fresh and warm, whereas in making American cheese the milk may be cooled and kept on the farm over night and hauled to the factory only once a day. The number of dealers selling Swiss, limburger, and brick cheese is small in comparison with those handling American cheese, and therefore, cheesemakers must find a market before undertaking the manufacture of these varieties, even less widely sold are the Edam, Neufchtel, Camembert, cheeses which must be sold and eaten within two weeks and are likely to spoil unless market outlets are assured. Cottage cheese utilizes cheese factory by-products ordinarily sent back to the farm for hog feeding. It is also perishable and should be eaten within a day or so after making, and cheese factories must have a co-operation from grocers in increasing their output of this variety.

COST OF PRODUCING MILK.

From the Milk Reporter.

Various organizations have taken a hand in assisting the farmer in ascertaining the approximate cost of producing milk and numerous investigations have been made, figures have been tabulated and some have been published, but it seems to be an endless task to get at the real facts and compile information which can be used as a standard. This is true because of the variation in the price of feed and the average production per cow.

Figures of the investigators, indicate that it costs the producers from four to eight cents per quart, depending, of course, upon the kind of cows, and the ability of the owner of the cows to feed the right kind of feed in the right proportion to get the largest amount of milk.

Up to two years ago the milk producers were being paid in the neighborhood of two and a half cents a quart, but since then there has been a very rapid increase, due to various causes. Perhaps, the principal cause, has been the increased price of feed, and second, the organization of the producers who have taken the matter into their own hands and have attempted to establish prices. It seems that the consumers have a fixed amount in their minds that they are willing to pay for milk and that amount seems to be ten or twelve cents, and if they are asked to pay more will use less milk. It has been impossible for the past few months to manufacture either butter or cheese and pay the farmer the price which they ask for milk for city trade, and the result brought about a surplus of milk during the latter part of 1917 in nearly every section of the country. This is true, notwithstanding that a large amount of milk has been used for condensing.

A milk producer is entitled to a fair profit on his labors, the same as those engaged in any other line of business, but there seems to be a tendency among the producers to neglect some of the most important factors, such as the breeding of better cows and weeding out the unprofitable one, and rely almost entirely upon the prices they are able to obtain for their milk, but we predict that this method cannot continue for any great length of time, and the farmers must inject business methods in dairying the same as business men are called upon to inject business methods into their chosen vocation or go out of business.

AQUATIC PRODUCTS AS FOOD.

The following article prepared by H. F. Moore, deputy commissioner, United States Bureau of Fisheries, appeared in a recent number of the American Food Journal:

I have been asked to write on "Marine Product Substitutes," but have taken the liberty to change the title. Some marine products are meats and most of them are the dietetic equivalent of meats, but they are not substitutes for anything. They stand on their own merits and should be eaten for what they are. They are good; they are nutritious; their use adds variety to the diet, and if the public will stop competing for the kinds that are best known and will buy what is seasonable, what is most abundant for the time being and requires least transporation to reach the consumer, they are economical.

We Americans pride ourselves on our enterprise and independence, but in some things we are the most conservative people of the world. Our markets in many respects are marvels. In normal times they are filled to overflowing with a variety of fruits and vegetables. We have them fresh at all seasons and the multitude of excellent canned products exceeds that of any other part of the world, but that is due largely to our varied climate and soil, our desire to "live as well as anybody," and our willingness to pay the price.

But we have a meat-eating tradition, for which there is perhaps good historic economic basis in the primeval game supplies, and the vaster areas formerly available for grazing meat producing animals. There has developed the myth that we have lowered the boasted American standard if meat is not served practically at every meal, and if a certain cut has the prestige of being the most expensive that is what we must have for our neighbor has it, and we are asg ood as he. A reasonable and correct standard of living should be based on the sufficiency, balance, digestibility, variety and palatableness of our diet and not on imitation of our more wealthy and probably less wise compatriots. The independence on which we pride ourselves is best exemplified by thinking for ourselves and not permitting somebody else to set the pace to our own and the nations disadvantage.

Protein and Fat in Fish.

We have come to look upon meat as the standard of proteinaceous foods and to regard anything which serves the same purpose in the diet as a substitute and a substitute in food is likely to suffer the same lack of public esteem as shoddy in a coat. Nobody wishes to use a substitute. We all want the real thing and marine foods are the real thing, as will be seen from the following table showing the percentages of proteins and fats in the edible parts of the various standard meats and animal foods dressed.

It will be observed that there is no characteristic difference between these several foods. All have a high content of protein, which is the constituent which makes the animal foods particularly valuable, and for which they are principally used. There is no substitute for it, and most vegetable foods contain it in comparatively small quantities. The fats vary considerably, and, in general, the fishes have a lower content than animals and fowls, but in this respect there are great seasonal differences, practically all fishes being deficient in this constituent immediately after the spawning period. Some of the differences showing in the table are probably due to seasonal causes rather than to inherent diversity between the species enumerated, but there are certain fishes, such as the salmon, sablefish, eulachon, eel, butterfish, menhaden, grayfish and others, which are conspicuously rich in oil and therefore are particularly valuable at this time when there exists the necessity for conservation of the ordinary animal fats.

Kind.	Protein. per cent.	Fat. per cent.
Sirloin steak,	20.00	19.00
Chicken,	24.30	2.60
Beef, round	23.00	9.00
Mutton, leg,	18.30	19.00
Salmon, fresh,	21.60	13.40
Shad,	18.55	9.48
Mackerel,	18.77	8.21
Eel,	15.82	18.74
Butterfish,	17.99	11.03
Striped bass,	18.54	2.83
Flounder,	13.82	.69
Halibut,	18.35	5.18
Carp,	19.07	1.26
Grayfish,	17.61	9.04
Herring roe,	17.53	2.41
Shad roe,	23.40	3.78
Fish milt, or buck roe,	14.87	2.57

It is well known to the housewife of today that when the normal quantity of protein is eaten it is converted into the body tissues—muscle, blood, etc., but if used in excess part of it is converted into fats or consumed as fuel. For the first and important purpose it cannot be replaced. Fat, on the other hand, is valuable only as fuel, or, if stored in moderate quantities, it is useful for certain mechanical purposes, such as the insulation of the body and the conservation of its heat. Its place in the diet may be taken by starches and sugars. Therefore, even if some fishes at some seasons are poor in oils, they will supply the valuable protein, and their deficiency in fuel qualities can be made good by using a little more of the cheap vegetable foods accompanying the meal.

Digestibility of Fish.

In its digestibility, fish rates as highly as in its nutritive constituents, and numerous investigations furnish ample evidence that fish is as wholesome and easily digested as other animal foods. Recent feeding experiments of the Department of Agriculture show that mackerel, butterfish, canned grayfish and canned salmon are on a practical parity in the completeness with which their protein and fats are digested, the combined percentage for protein being 92.5, and for fat 92.6. These results were based on eighteen experiments in feeding the fish as part of a mixed ration to six men.

Other Marine Foods.

The protein content of crustaceans (lobsters, crabs, shrimps) is a little lower than that of fish, but the chief difference in composition is a deficiency in fats. The mollusca (oysters, clams, mussels, scallops, etc.,) also contain less protein and fat, but in addition to these constituents they have from 1 to 4 per cent. of glycogen or "animal starch," a carbohydrate of nutrient value, the presence of which in the higher quantities produces the condition of so-called fatness when these shell fish are in prime condition. In their composition, oysters, mussels and clams, and probably other mollusca, resemble milk rather than meats and fish.

The flesh of whales porpoises and other marine mammals probably has about the same composition as the meat derived from the mammals of the land, which it resembles in general apperance, taste and texture.

As terrapin and turtles have high protein content, and some of them are rich in fats, they are particularly nutritious, though the quantity of refuse of shell, bone and viscera is so great that the proportion of nutrients to live weight is small. Practically all of the turtles, tortoises and terrapins are edible and one of them, the diamond back terrapin of the salt marshes of the Atlantic coast has the distinction of furnishing the most costly animal food in the world. The land and fresh water species, of which there are many, might be used to advantage at this time.

Possibilities of a Marine Diet.

An important consideration frequently overlooked is the opportunity which aquatic foods afford for almost limitless variation of diet. In addition to the whales and porpoises, the numerous species of shell fish and the many kinds of turtles and of terrapin, there are not less than 125 species of fish on the markets of the several sections of the country, and this number could be doubled if we were to utilize the kinds now caught and thrown away. While, in general, they resemble one another in composition, they differ widely in flavor and texture. When in addition to this extraordinary wealth of raw material thought is given to the fact that many of these fishes are obtainable not only fresh or frozen, but pickled, dry salted, smoked and otherwise prepared and that most of them can be cooked in various ways, the delectable possibilities of a sea food diet may be faintly appreciated.

There has been considerable complaint among consumers that fish now costs as much or more than beef, mutton or pork and there is criticism that the government, through its several agencies, is advocating the use of fish. The reduction of food prices is highly desirable, but while it is an important consideration at this time, it is not the most important. There is not enough of the animal foods to ration as in normal times the population, domestic and foreign, which is dependent on us, and the prime consideration is to get enough such food to go round even though the new kinds may cost as much as the old.

Some of the high prices which the housewife is asked to pay are due to profiteering, which there is reason to believe will be taken care of before long, but many of them are due to lack of marketing knowledge. Most of us know little or nothing about the qualities of fishes. We buy certain kinds because we happen to know their names and we are prone to relish names rather than the things they represent. If the fish asked for is not in stock, some other kind is sometimes substituted.

This habit of buying names results in a great demand for the better known fishes, the consumers are competing with one another for a limited supply and the inevitable rise in price occurs. Let us eat these fish by all means if we can afford them, for their consumption is but a part of the present necessity, but before we complain of prices let us make sure that we are using ordinary "horse sense" in our marketing.

I do not wish to criticise the women of our country, except constructively and helpfully for a larger proportion of women than men are doing their bit, but I have observed them both shopping and marketing and have failed not to be impressed by the different attitude with which they approach the two. If they were to consider values as carefully in selecting fish as in choosing hats the difficulty in regard to prices would be partly solved.

For this difference in approaching the two duties, however, the fish dealers rather than the women are responsible. The dry goods merchant and the milliner educated customer through their advertising and particularly by the attractive display of their commodities. The retail fish dealer seldom advertises and his display of stock often repels rather than attracts, notwithstanding the fact that the fish stall is susceptible of being made the most attractive in the market. What is needed more than anything else in order to make permanent from choice the public's present patriotic willingness to eat fish is the helpful co-operation of the retail fish trade, the exercise of salesmanship in assisting the purchaser to get what she really wants, and the cleanly and tasteful display of marine goods so that the consumer may become familiar with their names, appearance and qualities, or learn, even that such things exist.

The housewife may assist in the introduction of unfamiliar fishes which we have so long wasted by buying them when obtainable, or by persistently asking for them if not immediately in supply.

Some patience may have to be exercised, as fish are seasonal in their occurrence, and moreover there is no small difficulty in distributing widely a perishable commodity for which there has been no previous demand. If we are unable to get what we want when we want it we are but paying one of the penalties of our previous neglect to utilize the good things that we might have had.

DEHYDRATION A FACTOR IN CONSERVATION.

America now faces the most stupendous food problem in history, writes J. E. Bolling, M. E., in the American Food Journal. She must supply not only herself and her soldiers in service, but she must provide for her impoverished allies. When the fortunes of war began to render this fact apparent, there developed a stirring and powerful interest in new and efficient methods of food conservation. An appalling scarcity of tin foreseen earlier in the year made it impossible to preserve our foodstuffs by the ordinary method of canning. Public interest immediately focussed on dehydration, the possibilities of which are so remarkable as to be almost spectacular.

Technical papers and trade journals published carefully prepared and well illustrated articles describing various dehydrating processes. The public prints following the trend of public interest, hailed denydration as a new and wonderful process, offering a simple solution of the many difficulties incident to the preservation and transportation of the world's food supply. So much has been said and written about this that but a brief analysis is necessary here. Preservation of fruits and vegetables by a process of dessication was practiced by the ancient Egyptians. The French have known and used for many decades what they familiarly call "Julienne Vegetables." At the outbreak of the war Germany had more than dehydrating plant in active operation, and there is reliable information to the effect that this number has been increased to approximately 2,000. Nor is dehydration a new idea in this country.

Dehydration does not impair the form, quality, palatableness or nutritive value of the food.

SOME NEW FACTS REGARDING BUTTERFAT FOR FOOD.

J. H. Frandsen, Professor of Dairy Husbandry, University of Nebraska, contributes the following to a recent issue of the Butter, Cheese and Egg Journal:—

There has been an idea prevalent among dietists and chemists, as well as people in general, that all fats, regardless of their source, yielded only energy and heat when consumed by the animal or human body, and until recently no chemical or dietectic experiments had shown any real important difference between butterfat and other fats. It had, of course, been proved that fats of a low melting point were more digestible than those of a high melting point. Aside from this there was thought to be but little difference in their food value. In the estimation of many "fat was fat" and yielded only energy and heat.

The oleomargarine people often took advantage of this fact to exploit a cheap product as a substitute for butter. Whether or not this "just as good or better product" is at all worthy of the place they claim for it has been seriously questioned by creamery men. In this connection experiments carried on are peculiarly interesting and prove beyond doubt the real value of butter, viz., that butterfat not only yields energy and heat as do other fats, but that it contains something more vital than other fats—a principle, which like proteins, supplies the elements necessary for growth and life itself.

In experiments carried on with whits rats, young rats were fed mixtures composed of chemically pure protein, starch, fat, sugar and various salts, and got along splendidly for the first three months, when they lost appetite, fell off in growth and finally starved. After numerous repetitions of this nature the investigators found that when milk was added to the ration the little animals began to regain normal condition, to thrive and grow to maturity. Many changes were made in their diet to make it more palatable, changes in salts used, the kind and amounts of sugar, etc., but always the same results—growth ceased at the age of about four months. It was in an attempt to increase the palatability of the diet, by substituting pure butterfat for lard, which had been used as a fat in the ration that the experimenters found these new facts, for the little animals immediately began to grow just as when milk was fed. It was evident that butterfat supplies something necessary for growth which lard could not supply. Other experiments were carried on to determine whether other fats from the animal or vegetable kingdoms would produce the same effects as had butterfat. Experiments with tallow, olive oil, corn oil, cottonseed oil and peanut oil proved futile, while the fat of eggs and fats extracted from the cells of pigs kidneys produced the same results as did butterfat. Thus it seems evident that the fats obtained from the living protoplasms of the animal have this property of inducing growth after growth has ceased. Thus far no plant food. Thus far no plant fat has been found to possess this power.

Experiments with pigs and calves gave results similar to those obtained with rats. If records of experiments on man were available, it is reasonable to suppose that results fully as striking would be obtained. In this connection the editor of Hoard's Dairyman recalls two instances in which two public institutions, had in the interest of so-called economy, substituted oleomargarine for butter in the diet of the inmates. It was noted that when oleo was used the inmates were not in as good physical condition and that physicians were in greater demand than before. When oleo was replaced by butter it was reported that the health of the inmates was materially improved.

In the light of these experiments and observations it is reasonable to suppose that even more marked discrepancies would be apparent in the growth and general health of young children.

Just how much or little butterfat can be used and still maintain growth has not yet been determined—but enough has been proved to give the dairyman sure footing for his claim that butterfat is a better food than butter substitutes composed of vegetable oils and fats. Facts and fignres like these make it most embarrassing for the oleo manufacturer to claim that he has a "just as good as butter" article, and surely it behooves the housewife to give the most careful consideration to the results of these recent investigations and the conclusions which may be logically drawn from them, before she decides to eliminate butter from the menu.

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED DURING FEBRUARY.

But seventeen prosecutions for violation of the pure food regulations were brought during February by the Dairy and Food Bureau of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. This number was forty-eight less than were ordered during January.

Two prosecutions were brought in Somerset county under the oleomargarine regulations, one for the sale of oleo colored with annatto and sold for butter and one for the sale of oleo without a license and not stamped.

Under the pure food rules two prosecutions were brought in Clearfield county for the sale of flour which contained nitrous acid.

For violating of the reglations governing the sale of sausage two prosecutions were brought in Philadelphia county, one being for the sale of fresh pork sausage which contained cornstarch and an excess of water, and one for the sale of fresh pork sausage, containing wheat starch and an excess of water.

Allegheny, Beaver, Delaware and Philadelphia counties furnished the agents of the bureau with the most work, eleven prosecutions having been brought in these counties for violations of the cold storage regulations. One prosecution was brought for the sale of cold storage flounder, not properly marked, one for the sale of cold storage eggs unfit for food purposes, and fined for the sale of cold storage eggs not properly marked.

RECEIPTS OF THE DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU FOR THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY, 1918.

Food Fines	$ 120.00
Ice Cream Fines	50.00
Milk Fines, 1911	1,475.00
Oleomargarine Licenses	11,132.79
	$12,877.79

Total receipts of the Bureau from January 1st, 1918, to February 28th, 1918, inclusive, $416,547.79.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

It is estimated by the Food Administration that between $180,000,000 and $270,000,000 has been saved to the consumer on his sugar bill by the regulation of profits and the elimination of waste and speculation in the sugar trade in the last few months. Independent refiners say that but for regulation and control of the sugar market sugar would be selling at from 20 to 25 cents a pound. By securing an arbitrary wholesale price of 7⅓ cents a pound the Food Administration has made it possible to hold the retail price to between 8 and 10 cents a pound. In 1864 when there was no actual shortage of sugar the price went to 35 cents a pound.

According to an official statement the number of milch cows in the United States increased from 22,894,000 to 23,284,000 in 1917. It is true that some states have lost and some communities have lost heavily, but many of those who report the selling of cows overlook the fact that the average useful life of the dairy cow is but five years and that about 20 per cent. of them are discarded every year. Some observers have counted the total losses rather than the net losses. For instance Pennsylvania lost only 20,000 out of 980,000 cows last year. This is lower than the estimates generally given by dairymen but such is the official report.

The total yield of Texas peanuts is expected to be about 25,000,000 bushels. Cottonseed oil mills have taken up the crushing of the nuts and it is thought that about 300,000 barrels of peanut oil will be secured.

The total pack of salmon of all descriptions will, it is believed, be in the neighborhood of 9,000,000 cases. The pack last year was slightly over 7,000,000 cases.

The output of oleomargarine is increasing wonderfully in the Chicago district, the month of December showing a total, of over 17,000,000 pounds, compared with 14,000,000 for the previous December. The output of renovated butter, on the other hand, shows a falling off compared with December a year ago.

Despite the unusually large crops of both white and sweet potatoes last year only a small part of them had been marketed up to February 1.

The director of the dairying industry of New Zealand states that, although the production of butter has been well maintained, the quantities exported for the year show a decrease as compared with the previous year's figures. Owing to the scarcity of shipping space large quantities of butter throughout the Dominion were awaiting shipment and the quantity in cold storage now greatly exceeds the amount so held a year ago.

New York City is receiving 3,000 cans of milk a day less than it did at this time a year ago. The people of the city are consuming about 26 per cent. less than they did a year ago, probably owing to the increased price of milk.

Milk as it is now generally produced and handled is one of our cleanest foods.

Milk, even at the high price it now commands is a cheap food when compared with other foods.

Under the Food Control Act the United States Department of Agriculture is to use $10,000,000 for the purchase of nitrate of soda to be sold to the farmers for cash at cost. About 100,000 tons have been purchased by the government and will be sold to the farmers at $75.50 per ton plus the freight.

Selling and delivery make up 17 per cent. of the net cost of bread and over 12½ per cent. of the price the public pays for it. The heavy tax upon the public is the result of competition for business. Bread salesmen are paid a commission on the business secured which has been automatically increased with the increase on the price of the commodity. Five or six bakers deliver to each distributor, with the result that the quantities delivered are small and the cost of delivery high, and the same routes are covered by the wagons of several rival concerns. To satisfy the public demand for hot bread the baker increases his deliveries. All bakers follow suit in order to hold trade, and the public is compelled to pay an unnecessary delivery charge.

A 10-gallon can of 35 per cent. cream contains 1.7 times as much butterfat as a similar can of 20 per cent. cream and will weigh 600 pounds less. That is 10 cans of the 35 per cent. cream will make as much butter as 17 cans of 20 per cent. cream.

High producing cows are the basis of profiatable dairying; the most economical results cannot be obtained with poor producers.

Interest in food saving has given new life to a familiar old swindle, the "magic buttermaker," a device whereby the delighted housewife who sees it demonstrated for the first time is led to believe that she can transform one pound of butter into two pounds. This magic buttermaker operates on the same principle of churning one pound of butter with a pint of milk. The product which results like butter and weighs two pounds when placed on a pair of scales, but unfortunately, it is deficient in butterfat, the additional bulk and weight being chiefly water and air.

The interstate shipment of canned goods containing an excessive amount of brine or other liquid is unlawful and the government has taken action against some offenders in this respect. Canners generally recognize this fact, and it is seldom necessary to make objections to canned goods on this account. The Department has announced on numerous occasions that in packing foods the cans should be as full of the product as is practical for packing and processing and should contain only sufficient liquid to fill the empty space in the can and cover the food. Foods packed in excessive liquid not only are a cheat to the consumer and a violation of the Food and Drugs Act, but they cause an improper utilization of tin cans as well as of valuable space in freight cars and other common carriers.

The government is endeavoring to get grocers to push corn oil preparations for cooking. The high burning point of corn oil enables the cook to bring it to 600 degrees before putting the food on for frying and the hot oil instantly seals in food juices, retaining flavor and aroma, the food being cooked in its own juice instead of being saturated with grease. In one experiment an onion, a doughnut, a meat ball and a cod fish ball were all fried together in the same corn oil, none of them absorbing flavor from the other, an illustration of this sealing.

OLEOMARGARINE AND THE NATIONAL DAIRY UNION.

SUBSTITUTE MANUFACTURERS HAVE WAGED A CONTINUOUS FIGHT SINCE 1886.

By G. L. McKAY.

THE OLEO INTERESTS NOW HAVE A BILL BEFORE CONGRESS. EVERY CREAMERY SHOULD HELP IN THE FIGHT. TELEGRAPH YOUR CONGRESSMEN AND SENATORS TODAY. DO YOUR PART.

The necessity of passing better legislation for regulating the sale and control of oleomargarine, or margarine, as it is commonly called in European countries, is not a new issue. It has been a vexed question for nearly two score years.

Margarine originated in 1869 when Germany besieged Paris during the Franco-Prussian War. At the request of the government, Meze Mauries, the noted French scientist, produced this substitute for butter. The product manufactured then was very different to the oleomargarine we have today, as then only the best fats of the animal were taken and a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit was used for the melting of these fats. He evidently took into consideration the digestibility of the product he was manufacturing. At the present time a melting temperature of 150 degrees is used and the offal or intestinal fats are largely used. This in connection with cottonseed oil, peanut oil and a mixture of some butter and milk constitute the oleomargarine of today.

Every country where oleomargarine is manufactured or sold has certain restrictive measures controlling its manufacture and sale. Fraud and deception seem to have followed in the wake of this product. France, where the product originated, has had to amend its laws twice to protect the public against fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. In the United States the first law regulating this traffic was enacted in 1886. Grover Cleveland, then president, deemed it proper, in view of the importance of the subject, and the public interest aroused, to accompany the notice of his approval to congress in a memorable message from which I quote:

"The constitution has invested congress with a very wide legislative discretion, both as to the necessity of taxation and the selection of the objects of its burdens."

"Those who desire to see removed the weight of taxation now pressing upon the people from other directions may well be justified in the hope and expectation that the selection of an additional subject of internal taxation, so well able to bear it, will in consistency be followed by legislation relieving our citizens from the other numerous burdens rendered by the passage of this bill, even more than heretofore unnecessary and needlessly oppressive.

NOT AN INJUSTICE.

"I am convinced that the taxes which it creates cannot possibly destroy the open and legitimate manufacture and sale of the thing upon which it is levied. If the article has the merit which its friends claim for it, and if the people of the land, with full knowledge of its real character, desire to purchase and use it, the taxes created by this bill will permit a fair profit to both manufacturer and dealer. If the existence of the commodity taxed and the profits of its manufacture and sale depend upon disposing of it to the people for something which it deceitfully imitates, the entire enterprise is a fraud and not an industry.

"Not the least important incident relative to this legislation is the defence afforded the consumer against fraudulent substitution and sale of an imitation for a genuine article of food of very general household use.

"Notwithstanding the immense quantity of the article described in the bill, and notwithstanding the claims made that its manufacture supplies a cheap substitute for butter, I venture to say that hardly a pound ever enters a poor man's house under its real name and in its true character. Having entered upon this legislation, it is manifestly a duty to render it as effective as possible in the accomplishment of all the good which should legitimately follow in its train."

FRAUD UNDER OLD LAW.

The above law placed a tax of two cents per pound on oleomargarine, colored or uncolored, the same as the Underwood Amendment offered to the revenue bill would do. During the existence of this law, fraud and deception prevailed everywhere in the sale of oleomargarine. In fact, the fraud became so prevalent that the purchaser had no means of determining whether he way buying butter or oleomargarine at butter prices.

The very existence of the dairy business was threatened. The result was that the dairymen organized what is known as the Dairy Union with the venerable Governor Hoard, of Wisconsin, as president; Charles Y. Knight, of Chicago, as secretary, and H. B. Burler, of DeKalb, Illinois, as treasurer. The object of this organization was to get a law enacted that would furnish protection to the dairy business.

After carrying on a campaign for four years the present law was enacted in 1902 by congress, for both the protection of the purchaser and the producer of dairy products. A tax of ten cents per pound was placed on oleomargarine when it was colored yellow to imitate butter. It is taxed only one-fourth cent per pound when it is put up in its own color, white, or a very light yellow. This one-fourth cent per pound was placed on oleomargarine so as to bring it under the internal revenue department, as they have police facilities for enforcing the law and protecting the public against fraud.

TAX A LEGAL PROTECTION.

The dairymen have no desire to place a tax on oleomargarine if it can be sold to the public for what it is. If the tax were removed entirely, oleomargarine would be placed under the Bureau of Chemistry, and as they have no jurisdiction over food products until it becomes interstate traffic the chance for fraud would be very great. In addition to this that department does not have the police facilities for enforcing the law against a product like oleomargarine.

Any law that will permit oleomargarine to be colored yellow in imitation of butter will increase its fraudulent sale. There must be a line of demarcation between the two products. The nearer the counterfeit can imitate the genuine article the more easily the public can be deceived.

We have an exceptionally good illustration of fraud being carried on in the sale of another food product where there is no line of demarcation. I refer to the sale of storage eggs for fresh eggs. If storage eggs were yellow or some distinct color the housewife would have some mark of distinction to enable her to tell the fresh egg from the storage egg. Merchants advertise eggs as strictly fresh, even having a guarantee sealed in the package, when there is not a strictly fresh egg in the entire package. The fortunate thing about the egg fraud is that it only lasts during the winter months, while the fraud in oleomargarine goes on the year around.

OLEO ORGANIZED.

A peculiar condition exists in our country. On the one hand we have millions of farmers disorganized who are producing and selling the genuine article; on the other hand, we have some forty odd manufacturers of a counterfeit product who are thoroughly organized so much so that they are able to take up the time of the congress of the United States year after year, trying to get through some measure that will allow them to more easily dispose of their product. So thorough is their organization that the dairymen have to keep a man in Washington, D. C., on a salary for the sole purpose of safeguarding their interests.

If the agricultural interests of this country were thoroughly organized and made their wants known to congress, they would pass legislation that would compel oleomargarine to be sold to the public at prices commensurate with the cost of production, and in such a manner that the public would know what it was buying.

That an enormous amount of fraud exists under present regulations cannot be denied. Former Commissioner Cabell testified before the agricultural committee that over fifty per cent. of the oleomargarine made was, in his estimation, sold for butter and at butter prices. He said that the present law was so loose that you could drive a team of horses through it, consequently he could not prevent fraud in the sale of this counterfeit product. His successor, however, was able to send nearly one hundred of the crooks who were dealing in oleomargarine to the penitentiary, in addition to collecting millions of dollars of revenue.

PLAY FOR HOUSEWIFE.

The oleomargarine manufacturers, through their campaign of misrepresentation through the press, have in some cases aroused the sympathy and aid of the housewives in some of the large cities. They tell them they are paying a ten cent tax, which comes out of the consumer, and enables the so-called "butter trust" to control the butter market. It is true that a ten cent tax was placed on colored oleomargarine by congress for the purpose of protecting the consuming public from fraud and deception in the purchase of butter or oleomargarine. The ten cent tax is placed on this commodity when it is colored in imitation of butter. It is only taxed one-fourth cent a pound when it is put up and sold in its natural color, which is white or very light yellow.

There were manufactured in the United States during the last fiscal year, 1916, according to the Internal Revenue report, 152,509,912 pounds of oleomargarine. Of this enormous amount 97¾ per cent. of it paid one-fourth cent tax per pound, therefore, the cry of the ten cent tax is a false cry given out by the manufacturers of oleomargarine to deceive the consuming public.

The amendment to the revenue bill offered by Senator Underwood, of Alabama, in behalf of the oleomargarine interests was somewhat of a joke, as the oleomargarine interests gave out to the public that this amendment would reduce the cost of living when in reality it was introduced to increase the revenue of the country. If it were to increase the revenue the people purchasing oleomargarine would have to pay the increased revenue. This amendment placed a two cent tax on oleomargarine, colored or uncolored. As 97¾ per cent. of the oleomargarine manufactured during the last fiscal year only paid one-fourth cent tax, this would increase the tax on the consuming public one and three-fourth cents per pound, especially on the 97¾ per cent. which only paid one-fourth cent as stated before.

OLEO PHILANTHROPY.

The oleomargarine manufacturers were quite willing to pay the extra tax as their product could be more readily sold as butter and at butter prices, since the consuming public would have to pay a much higher price for oleomargarine than it does at the present time on account of the color.

Four years ago I spent considerable time in Europe, studying the control and sale of oleomargarine in different countries. The regulations there differ from ours as they do not place a tax on oleomargarine, but they prohibit the coloring and compel it to be sold in stores where butter is not handled. In many cases heavy penalties are exacted when these laws are violated.

France, where oleomargarine originated, has very rigid laws regulating its sale and manufacture. The coloring in imitation of butter is prohibited there. Factories where oleomargarine is manufactured must have large signs with letters over a foot high, displayed in a conspicuous place, stating that oleomargarine is manufactured there. Wagons conveying it to retail stores must also have signs conspicuously displayed on the sides "Margarine Wagons." Retail stores must also have signs in conspicuous places and no butter can be kept on the premises where oleomargarine is sold.

MAKES DETECTION EASY.

Belgium has laws quite similar. They, however, require that certain ingredients must be mixed with oleomargarine so that it can be quickly detected such as one-half per cent. of sesame oil and one-half per cent. potato starch. The manufacture of oleomargarine is prohibited on the premises where butter is made and sold, in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Luxemburg, Norway, Portugal and Sweden.

Portugal and Sweden also require that sesame oil be incorporated in the manufacture of oleomargarine. The manufacture and sale of mixtures of butter and oleomargarine are specifically prohibited in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany and Norway. The sale of oleomargarine on premises where butter is sold is prohibited in Belgium, France, Germany, Luxemburg and Russia.

Denmark, on the other hand, where more margarine is consumed per capita than in any other country, prohibits the coloring but permits it to be sold in the same stores where butter is sold, but requires that it be put up in oblong packages.

Some of the European countries such as France, Germany and Portugal prohibit the addition of coloring matter to oleomargarine. Italy, Russia and Denmark prohibit oleomargarine being colored in imitation of butter. The latter regulation prevents their incorporating ingredients that might impart color.

WEAKNESSES OF LAW.

The oleomargarine I saw in the countries I visited was so light in color that no one could mistake it for butter. Some countries prohibit the mixing of milk or butter with oleomargarine in its manufacture. Our present law is very lenient in regard to the manufacture and sale of this product in comparison to the regulations of many other countries. One of the weak points of our law is what the politicians term a "joker." At the time of the passage of the present law the fight was so fierce and close in the senate that one man was able to hold up this measure. I refer to Foraker, of Ohio, who was then in the senate. The original bill called for any shade of yellow in resemblance of butter. Senator Foraker insisted on cutting this term out and inserting "artificially colored." This enables the manufacturer of oleomargarine to use peanut oil and other ingredients solely for the purpose of imparting color to their product. The result is that a great deal of oleomargarine that has a high color escapes the ten cent tax.

We permit oleomargarine manufacturers to use the cheaper fats such as intestinal fats and vegetable oil, milk, cream or butter in making their product and only tax them one-fourth cent per pound when oleomargarine is sold in its natural color, which is white or light yellow. There is no limit to the amount of water that may be incorporated in oleomargarine. In addition to this, such terms as Butterine, Jersey Brand, Holstein Brand, Guernsey Brand, and other such names indicate that it is made from milk.

On the other hand if the creameryman incorporates the smallest fraction of a per cent. of foreign fats in connection with his butter he is required to pay a tax of ten cents per pound and a license of $600 a year, and to brand his product as adulterated butter. There should be a line of demarcation between these products, as stated before, that would prohibit the mixing of oleomargarine and butter, unless the same were branded adulterated butter. This would prevent oleomargarine masquerading as butter.

THERE'S A REASON.

There must be some reason why the packing interests of the United States want to donate a revenue of this kind to the United States government. The reason is plain to everyone who has given any thought to the subject. By coloring their counterfeit product yellow in imitation of butter, they can more readily dispose of it to the consuming public for butter and at butter prices, and yet these same people put up a wail that they are furnishing the poor man with a cheap substitute for butter. Farmers and dairymen in every state should put forth a special effort against this obnoxious move made by the packing interests and the Cotton Crushers' Association, so that nothing of this kind will come up before congress again. On the one hand, we have the interests of between six and seven million farmers as against the interests of about forty manufacturers of a counterfeit product.

Let your wants be known to your senators and representatives. The politician in Washington and elsewhere has his ear close to the ground as to the wants of his own district. This is a matter that should be discussed frequently at farmers' meetings of various kinds, so as to arouse them to the danger confronting them, and the necessity of making their wants known.

The enemies of dairying are not only well organized but also have an abundant supply of wealth. They are able to keep a string of attorneys and lobbyists in Washington to do their bidding.

Everyone interested in dairying and the welfare of our agricultural interests for the future should back up the Dairy Union in an effort to get a law through congress that will compel oleomargarine to be sold on its own merits, thus giving everyone a fair deal.

CONCERNING OLEOMARGARINE FEES.

Referring to the recent comment advocating the elimination or reduction of license fees required of retail oleomargaine dealers, Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust, stated that there are many reasons why the fee should not be eliminated or reduced.

"Years ago," he said, "prosecutions were made in practically every county of the State for violations of the law. In Allegheny alone five hundred cases were pending at one time against moonshiners and the other oleo crooks. There was so much odium connected with the sale of oleo that the people not only were afraid to buy it but mistrusted eating it. This has all been eliminated. The business has been taken out of the hands of unscrupulous dealers and placed in the hands of reputable merchants. At the present time many of the largest and best stores in Pennsylvania are handling oleomargarine. There is ten times as much consumed in the State as there was six years ago.

Forty-two hundred licenses were issued during the past year and every city, town and hamlet has it on sale. If the license and all tax were taken off of oleo, it would not reduce the cost one-eighth of a cent a pound to the consumer, as this tax and license does not amount on the average to one-eighth of a cent for each pound sold.

The price of oleomargarine is regulated by the demand and price of butter. In Phillipsburg, N. J., just across the river from Easton, oleomargarine is retailed at exactly the same price that it is sold in Easton. The state of New Jersey requires no license and this fact does not reduce the price there.

Commissioner Foust further declared that if the license were eliminated or reduced to a small fee, that an irresponsible class of people would engage in the business. They would not be able to understand the comprehensive law and some would not want to, with the result that we will be going back to the days of many violations and prosecutions. The courts of the different counties throughout the Commonwealth would have to spend five times as much as the fees amount to in trying a class of poor people for violation of the law. The business of retailing oleomargarine will become discredited and the consuming public will be afraid to eat it.

Commissioner Foust says that an added reason is that the appropriation of the Dairy and Food Bureau would have to be many times larger, with an enormous force of agents to apprehend the moonshiners and crooks and the class of irresponsible people who would violate the law as dealers. Another feature as added proof that the license fee does not interfere with the sale or consumption of oleo, is that there is twice as much oleomargarine sold in Pennsylvania per capita as in any other state of the Union.

TO PRODUCERS OF AND DEALERS IN EGGS.

The following questions have been asked of the State Department of Agriculture and Industries by several retail merchants over the State. The answer thereto by the Department is given for the information of other dealers or producers who may desire the same information.

Questions: Is it a violation of the law for a retail merchant to ship eggs to produce dealers to be candled and the loss in bad eggs to be deducted by them? If this practice is not permissible under the law, are retail merchants who buy eggs from the farmers required to candle them at the time of purchase or at any time prior to sale?

Answer: First, retail merchants cannot buy eggs "case-count" and ship them to produce dealers to be candled without violating the law. The objects of the law, requiring the sale of only edible eggs, their edibility to be established by candling, are to conserve the supply of this wholesome but exceedingly perishable food by stimulating the producers to market their surplus eggs fresh and sound and requiring the dealers to rush them on to the consumers in a cool, sound condition. An effectuation of these objects will place the price of eggs to the producers and consumers on the basis of sound food and forever eliminate the doubtful "eight to ten sound, two to four rotten" basis. The result will be both an increase in the production and consumption of eggs and a saving in the cost and space required for the transportation of waste eggs, and, as well, release more of the non-perishable foods for the fighting forces in France. If retail dealers or hucksters were allowed to buy eggs from the producers on the old "case count" plan—thus providing a market for unsound eggs—and dump them into the cars and onto another dealer to become responsible for their character, the purposes of the law would be defeated. Retail merchants, hucksters, commission men, wholesale merchants and others engaged in the sale of eggs are held alike responsible under the law for the sale, offer or exposure for sale of any lot of eggs containing more than 5%, or 18 eggs to a case of 30 dozen, unfit for food.

Second, all retail merchants are required by law to buy only candled eggs, or, if they receive uncandled eggs, to candle them and pay for only the sound ones.

Respectfully,

J. M. MOORE,
Special Food and Drug Clerk,
Alabama State Department of Agriculture and Fisheries.

RECEIPTS OF THE DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU FOR THE MONTH OF APRIL, 1918.

Cold storage fines,	$151 00
Cold storage licenses,	150 00
Egg fines,	25 00
Food fines,	605 00
Ice cream fines,	25 00
Lard fines,	50 00
Meat fines,	100 00
Milk fines, 1911,	850 00
Non-alcoholic drink fines,	50 00
Oleomargarine licenses,	6,178 41
Oleomargarine fines,	400 00
Sausage fines,	300 00
Vinegar fines,	150 00
	$9,034 41

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED DURING APRIL.

During the month of April the Dairy and Food Division of the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture ordered 134 prosecutions against dealers in various parts of the State for violations of the Pure Food Regulations.

Violations of the cream and milk rules were the most numerous, 114 prosecutions being ordered against dealers for selling milk and cream not up to the required standard. The prosecutions were brought in Allegheny, Beaver, Bedford, Blair, Bucks, Carbon, Centre, Chester, Clearfield, Clinton, Erie, Huntingdon, Lawrence, Luzerne, Mercer, Philadelphia, Schuylkill, Warren and Washington counties. They were: for cream, low in butterfat, 14; milk low in fat and partially skimmed, 1; milk low in solids, watered, 2; milk low in fat and solids, partially skimmed, 3; milk, watered, 5; milk low in fat and solids, partially skimmed, 9; milk low in butterfat, 15; milk low in fat and solids, 65.

Three prosecutions were brought in Philadelphia county for violations of the pure food regulations, 1 for the sale of candy, dirty and unfit for food purposes and 2 for the sale of cake artificially colored with a coal tar dye in imitation of egg.

Ten ice cream dealers were prosecuted for the sale of vanilla ice cream low in butterfat, the suits being brought in Bedford, Clearfield, Luzerne, Philadelphia and Potter counties.

Bedford, Northampton and Philadelphia counties furnished three prosecutions of dealers for violation of the oleomargarine act—for the sale of oleo with license, uncolored, 1; for the sale of oleo for butter, uncolored, 1; for the sale of oleo, peddled from wagon, 1.

Two Erie county merchants were prosecuted for not observing the regulations regarding the sale of fresh meat, by selling hamburg steak containing sulphites. One Philadelphia county dealer was prosecuted for selling raspberry soda, artificially flavored, and one from the same county for violating the sausage act by selling frankfuerters containing an excessive amount of moisture.

FOOD IN FRANCE.

The cherished dainties of the Frenchman have been ruthlessly snatched away from him. No longer can he take his piece of delicious pastry in the middle of the afternoon nor indulge in that curious meal that he used to call in English "le five o'clock." The French papers, with their characteristic stoicism, have not a word to say on the subject and it is from the Paris correspondent of the Westminster Gazette that we learn of the situation there. He writes:

"France is entering on a new stage of the ever-changing food problem, and the fresh restrictions which have been imposed have the effect of lopping off all the little luxurious superfluities which French people enjoy. The death knell of pastries and biscuits of all kinds has been rung. They have fought hard for existence. When the use of flour was forbidden for their manufacture one discovered ingenious substitutes—rice flour, potato flour, and sometimes maize—often crisp fried potatoes. But now they are really doomed along with ices, preserved fruits, and all that made the "five o'clock" possible. Milk cannot be served in any public place after 9 o'clock in the morning.

"As for bonbons and all kinds of chocolates, they, too, are banned. The fiat is final and flat. Sandwitches are a thing of the past. One can only eat between certain fixed hours. Moreover, in the restaurants butter and cream and soft cheeses may not be served. The menu is limited to four dishes in any circumstances. The amount of bread that may be consumed is 100 grams (3½ ounces)."

Long after we had introduced wheatless days, the correspondent says, the pastry cooks of Paris displayed windowfuls of delicious pastry, though outside the capital not a "cooky" could be found. This was done with the approval of the government as a sign to all the world that the French spirit was still keeping up, a sort of translation into sugar and pastry of Petain's famous "They shall not pass." Today the world is convinced of the spirit of France, and this recondite camouflage is no longer necessary.

It appears that France is not in anything like the plight that Britain is. The food is there; the only difficulty is the prices; and though these sound exorbitant to French ears, they do not look so very large to American eyes.

"At present it is not true to say that France is in straits. The prices of food are very dear. They are at least double those of pre-war-days and in some cases three and four and five times as high. But if one has the money it is easy to find the goods. Meat, for instance, is dearer than in England, but it is also more plentiful. For 72 cents a pound one can have a very good cut of beef. Veal runs dearer, perhaps 16 to 18 cents a pound more, while mutton is a few pence cheaper.

A rabbit cannot be obtained for less than a dollar, while a chicken at the cheapest is $2.25. Fish is very scarce. A herring which would have been sold at a sou three years ago now costs 8 cents, while cod sells at 60 cents a pound.

Vegetables are correspondingly dear. New potatoes fetch 12 cents a pound and old potatoes 4 to 5 cents. A cauliflower can be bought for a franc.

Eggs are now getting cheaper. They were up to 10 cents each, but now fair-sized eggs may be had for 6 cents. Milk is 14 cents a quart and bread (of which one is allowed eleven ounces a day), 18 cents a quarter loaf. Decent tea cannot be obtained for less than $1.50 a pound, while coffee, which curiously has never raised in price, is 60 cents a pound. Sugar works out at 17 cents a pound, and one is allowed to consume just over a pound a month. Figs, largely used to sweeten puddings, cost 30 cents a pound.

"The astonishing thing to those who love occasionally to dine in the cheaper restaurants is that they have managed somehow to keep down their prices. True, the dinner costs more than before the war, but in the poor artistic quarters, in those clean little rooms that are a feature of Parisian life, the artist of humble purse can still be found taking a repast at thirty-five cents. The portion of meat may be exiguous, but there is a plentiful supply of sauce, and somehow, by the mysterious devices of the culinary art, the appetite is satisfied. The fashionable restaurants, of course, are very much dearer, and indeed there are many places where the man of moderate means could once dine which are now impossible to any one who is not a rich rentier or a munition profiteer—or a British or American officer making the most of his Paris leave without unduly counting the cost."

CONVINCE THE CONSUMER.

A successful dairy woman writes us: "I have been intensely interested in your editorials on the milk situation. There is only one trouble, they don't reach the people who need them most. This woman has struck the weak point in the merchandising of dairy products. The publicity work of the dairy press has accomplished some good but it can reach the consuming public only at second hand. The value of milk as food has long been recognized. The person to be reached by the proposed advertising campaign is the woman who feeds the family and to reach her and to teach her there must be established an educational campaign of advertising. Such a campaign will cost money—lots of it in the aggregate—but small if contributors will contribute each his share, and it would be financed and controlled by producers. Where is the dairy Moses who will lead the dairymen out of the wilderness, bind them together as one person, and make them an effective force in providing adequate markets for their deserving products.

Now, Mrs. Consumer is not concerned herself with what it costs Mr. Dairyman to produce his milk. All she wants to know is what and where she can buy cheapest, what she must and can buy and how she can serve what she buys so as to make it tempting and palatable to those who sit at her table. She has been trained to look for bargains and she will pay higher prices and buy more dairy products only when convinced that they are relatively cheaper than other products, that her family will like them, and that the continued good health of all members of the family and the proper growth of the children demand their continued and increased use. There is sufficient authoritive information to make such a campaign successful, there are competent advertising men available to get this information before the public in attractive form, and to supply the necessary funds.

WAR TIME DAIRYING IN THE UNITED STATES.

The following extracts from an article contributed to a recent issue of the Milk Dealer, by J. H. Frandsen, Professor of Dairy Husbandry of the University of Nebraska, may prove interesting:

Since the beginning of the world war in August, 1914, many a prediction has been made as to the duration of the war and its effects on the industrial and agricultural situation in America. Possibly, because they were based on imagination, but largely because accurate information was not obtainable, these predictions are in need of more or less modification. However, statistics are now available indicating that over 60,000,000 men have been withdrawn from productive fields to take up actively some phase of war work. These men are not only not producing but are entirely dependent on the efforts of others for their food supply.

This situation will aid us in understanding the food shortage existing at the present time.

As a nation we had formerly been concerned with feeding our own population and with seemingly a good balance for export, we had not considered it as a problem. Statistics, however, show that in normal times the rate of food production in America had not kept pace with the increase in population, so that we prided ourselves on being a land of plenty—and rightly so—we seem to have been approaching the time when we, like peoples of older nations, would have to meet the question of food production squarely and work out our own salvation, as older nations have been forced to do.

This problem has been rushed upon us by our entry into the war. Not only has our producing population been reduced by the number of our soldiers in the field and in training camps, but our consuming population has been greatly increased, for not only have we to feed our soldiers and ourselves, but we must help more than ever to meet the distress of our allies. We must send them immense quantities of wheat and meat, fat and sugar and dairy products.

It has been discovered that our immense surplus has disappeared and that now our efforts must be devoted to a much greater production, as well as conserving the limited supply now on hand.

According to statistics compiled by the United States Food Administration, the production of dairy products in the United States did not in the years just preceding the war keep pace with the increase in population, to say nothing of the enormous additional demands on account of the war.

On account of the depletion of European food resources and of the constantly increasing number of American soldiers in Europe, it is absolutely certain that, at least until the end of the war we may expect a constantly increasing demand for dairy products abroad. In addition it is safe to assume that at least this marked demand will continue for a period after the war, for naturally the first action of the people of devastated Europe toward reconstruction will be the growing of such crops as will at least bring partial relief to the shortage of bread. It is reasonable to assume that it will take them years to bring up their depleted dairy herds to the place they held before the war. In the meantime the people must have milk and butter and cheese and it will fall to America to supply a large part of these, at least for years to come.

It is reasonable to assume also that the home consumption of dairy products will show a marked increase especially in the form of milk and soft cheese, since under general conditions these are not capable of export but can be used at home and thus release for export meat and fat which are of more concentrated form and of better keeping quality. Add to this the further fact that we are just in the beginning of a nation-wide campaign to educate the consumer to the real merits of dairy products—that milk is not only food for infants but that it contains nutrients that should form part of the diet of everyone; that butter is not a luxury simply to make bread taste better but is one of the cheapest and most desirable sources of energy; that cheese is a valuable muscle builder and one of the best substitutes for meat.

Those behind the food conservation movement and those who have made a real study of the food situation do not advise the limiting of the consumption of dairy products. They rather urge a liberal though not wasteful use of milk and soft cheese especially in order that less bulky and better keeping foods may go in increased quantities to our allies.

The warring countries of Europe are in dire straits for fats (energy foods). Through the press we note a constant urgent appeal of the German leaders for fat and more fat for the soldiers and civilians alike. The same is true of our own allies and we must not let them suffer for want of fat so long as we have an abundant supply of coarse bulky feeds that cannot otherwise be used for human consumption to produce the best of all fats—butterfat.

We are getting away from the idea which formerly was prevalent among dietians and chemists as well as among people in general that all fats regardless of their source, yield only heat and energy when consumed by the animal or human body. Just recently investigators have made discoveries of vital importance in regard to the value of milk fats. They have found that unlike other fats, butterfat has the ability of power to produce growth after growth has ceased in young animals used in the experiments. In other words milk fat has been found to contain a vital principle necessary for growth and life itself.

SUBSTITUTES FOR SUGAR.

The scarcity of sugar in Europe has brought back projects that were ventilated more than 100 years ago when the continental blockade had suppressed sugar arrivals.

Thus the Amsterdam correspondent of the Louisiana Sugar Planter says: Sweden contemplates planting sugar maple trees alongside the highways and railroads in order to expand the sugar supplies. The making of syrup from grapes is suggested in France. In 1810 Napoleon promised prizes for the preparation of substitutes for sugar and great strides were made by the scientists Parmentier and Proust in making sugar from grapes. Indeed it looked as if the sugar from cane would be entirely supplemented in France consumption by sugar from raisins.

In this time of scarcity the project is, however, being taken up. It is suggested that the grapes be pressed and the sap sterilized. It is claimed that not only the nutritive power of the sugar in the sirup is the same as that in refined sugar, but the former also contains precious salts and above all iron phosphtae which is an excellent tonic for the human organism. The correspondent says Holland has dried strawberry leaves for tea, roasted acorns and chestnuts for coffee, a kind of sawdust for bread, and other substitutes have to be invented, because both the real article and the first substitutes are vanishing from trade.

OUR OBLIGATIONS AND OPPORTUNITY.

From Hoard's Dairyman.

In a most excellent editorial on the "Dairyman's Obligations and Opportunity" the Northwest Dairyman says:

"All individuals and all wâr industries have war problems to solve and war duties to perform. Perplexities that were unknown in the past are faced by every person and every business—and opportunities for patriotic service are found that were never known before.

"The dairy industry is not an exception. Its problems are difficult but its privilege is great—for by solving its problems it will do much to help win the war.

"The dairyman's war obligations are to maintain and increase herds, to utilize more effectively milk by-products that have been wasted or only partly used as human food, and to apply to the industry, if possible, improvements in methods of feeding and management whereby production may be economically increased.

Our opportunity lies in the enormously increased demand for milk and all milk products caused by the war, largely for export. This is no time for the far-seeing dairy farmer to think of reducing his herd except by getting rid of unprofitable cows. That he should do in peace or in war. But the tremendous slaughter of dairy cattle in Europe because of lack of meat and no feed to give them is going to afford the man who can look ahead a wonderful opportunity for profit in the future if he can hold onto his herd and increase its efficiency. In such times as these it is always the men of shallow vision who bolt the track. Of course, the scarcity of farm help is a serious factor in the problem but that can be greatly helped by a deeper study into the economy of doing farm work.

But few of us dairy farmers have ever really addressed ourselves in earnest to the question of better management of our labor. The profit of so doing has not been enough to get us down close and hard to the problem. We want to do business just as we have always done it. But now grim necessity has taken charge of the matter and we must study how to save labor and how to make labor more effective. One of the best things we can do is to get rid of spending costly labor on unprofitable cows. There's a big leak right at that point. Another is in the use of labor-saving machinery and the right care of machinery and tools when we get them. But high above all stands the imperative decree: "Hold onto the cow! Don't throw away your future opportunity for a momentary gain." At the close of the war if we keep our herds unimpaired we will meet with still larger demands for our dairy products, for there will be, comparatively speaking, no cows in Europe to produce milk products. So let us look at the question on its larger side if we would be wise to our own salvation.

FARM WHEAT HOLDINGS.

The official crop report for March is of great interest every year because it contains an estimate of the stocks of grain on farms March first. This year, in view of the abnormal grain situation and the urgent needs of Europe, these figures are of extraordinary interest not only to our own people but to several other nations dependent on them for bread. The report shows that on March first farmers held over 111,000,000 bushels of wheat, against 100,650,000 bushels last year and 244,448,000 bushels two years ago, says the National Stock man and Farmer. We do not assume to know more about this matter than the official statisticians can find out but we do believe that the estimate of farms stocks at the beginning of this month are too low. It is hard to prove anything by statistics this year, as studying them merely churns a fellow's brains, but where is the wheat of the crop of 1917 and the small reserves held July first if it is not on farms? Receipts at primary markets July first to March first were 145,335,000 bushels below receipts for the smaller crop of 1916, during the same months. Consumption has evidently been below that of last year. Exports and primary receipts cannot tell their tale as usual, however, because the wheat has not been moved as under normal conditions. More of it no doubt has gone directly to mills, and from country elevators to seaboard for exportation that is usual, and if we try to account for all of it we can do but little but guess. Let more expert guessers do that.

It seems to us that there are some substantial reasons for thinking that there is actually a larger supply on farms than any statistician would be likely to find by comparative estimates even if made by experts in this work. One of these reasons is that since the late harvest there has been no great inducement for anyone to gather in wheat, that is to say there was no financial reason why buyers should go out and locate wheat and get it to market. Wheat does not move alone; somebody must go after it or the owner must have some inducement to sell it. Our price fixing policy has destroyed this powerful motive on both sides. Buyers have lacked the encouragement of profit and producers have rested secure under the knowledge that they could get the price any time. Moreover confusion about country prices as related to official prices and an unfamiliar system of grading have tended to retard the movement from farms. There are also some local evidences that farm wheat stocks are larger than generally realized.

PRICE AND CONSUMPTION OF DAIRY PRODUCTS.

It is a well known fact that whenever dairy products advance in price there is a decrease in consumption. When butter retails at 25 to 30 cents a pound a great deal more is consumed than when it retails for 40 to 50 cents a pound, says Hoard's Dairyman. When butter is high priced a large amount of butter substitute is used, but invariably people return to the use of butter as soon as they feel it is within the reach of their pocketbooks. We had a striking illustration come to our attention two or three years ago, when butter fell in wholesale price from 35 to 25 cents a pound. We inquired of a young man who had been working in an oleomargarine factory as to why he was at home, and he remarked that the drop in the price of butter had decreased the manufacture of oleomargarine and that a large number of men had been laid off. This indicates to us that the people prefer butter to oleomargarine and will use it if they feel they can afford it. It is the duty of the dairy interests to inform people of the food value of butter and get a larger number to consume it, even at 50 and 60 cents a pound.

Last fall the price of milk increased about 2 cents a quart. This abrupt advance in the price of milk caused a decreased consumption. In many instances consumption was decreased to the amount of 25 per cent. and in certain regions of New York City, 50 per cent.

The Jewish mother, we are informed, knows the value of milk and will purchase it no matter what the price is. She insists on having an adequate supply for her children. If more mothers took this attitude toward milk, they would find their children stronger, that they would grow better, and would be less susceptible to illness.

We find in a bulletin published by the United States Department of Labor a survey was made to procure information pertaining to the effect of the price of milk on consumption. The information collected in this survey was as follows:

"The 2,200 families visited represented 12,439 individuals, of which 4,467 were adults, 2,534 were children from 6 to 13 years old and 5,438 were children under 6 years old.

"The total amount of milk purchased by these families at the present time is 3,193 quarts daily; a year ago it was 4,797 quarts daily. This represents a decrease of 1,604 quarts. This decrease, to be sure, is slightly offset by an increased consumption of condensed milk according to the survey.

The bulletin concludes "It is the duty of every individual community to see that its children have milk of good quality and in sufficient amount to insure their normal development. The malnutrition of our children, was even before 1914, a serious national policy and one demanding urgent attention."

We have done all we can to show how essential milk is to the health and development of our children, but unfortunately we do not reach the consumer in large cities.

THE SOIL IS THE PLANT KITCHEN.

The soil is not a dead, inert mass of material, that we farmers are so apt to think it to be. It is filled with life. More wonderful processes are going on within it than human ingenuity can imitate. The greatest chemical laboratories in the world do not begin to compare with it. In the soil organic matter is being decomposed, mineral compounds broken up, and new compounds formed, all to feed the hungry plant roots creeping down into every nook, niche and cranny of the soil to feed upon the surface of the tiny soil particles.

I like to think of the soil as a great plant kitchen; the plants are the boarders who must be well fed; bacteria are the cooks, organic matter and mineral compounds the raw material which must be worked over and served as prepared plant food.

How well the crops will be fed will depend upon three factors: First, the amount of raw materials in the soil that can be used for plant food; second, the number of bacteria at work as cooks; third, the environment in which the bacteria work.

SOIL CONDITIONS.

Just as it is necessary to keep the cooks in our kitchens good natured by providing them with plenty of fresh air, light, and sanitary conditions, so we must give attention to keeping the bacteria in the soil good natured by giving them the kind of conditions they like. Bacteria to do their work rapidly and well must have air, moisture, heat and a soil free from acids.

Soils not properly drained do not let air circulate through them. Cold, water-logged, undrained land does not offer favorable environment for soil bacteria and plants growing in such a soil will not be properly fed.

One of the first steps, then, toward increasing the productive power of the soil is to drain the wet spots often by a few hours labor with a team, plow and a scraper, outlets will be made which let the water drain off from low spots that otherwise would be flooded in wet times. A few rods of tile properly laid may often increase crop production sufficiently to many times pay for the cost of the tile.

Organic matter in the soil helps to improve soil tilth. It loosens heavy soils and helps to bind together loose, sandy soils. It acts like a sponge to hold moisture in such form as is most desired in the soil. It is also a source of food for the bacteria and constitutes a large part of the raw material which must be worked over into plant foods. For these reasons much attention should be given to provide the soil with sufficient organic matter, either as manure or green crops plowed under.

THREE ELEMENTS LIKELY TO BE LACKING.

Nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are the three elements most likely to be lacking in the soil. Nitrogen is for the most part contained in the organic matter of the soil. Soils with a large supply of this element are dark in color and for this reason black soils have always been desired by farmers. Peat soils and soils heavily fertilized with manure have often an excessive amount of this element and a deficiency of the others. On such land grain grows tall and rank, lodges badly and ripens slowly.

Phosphorous seems to be of special value to the plant in producing large plump kernels of grain, good root development, and early maturity.

Phosphorus seems to be of special value to the plant in produc- a deficiency of this element, the straw is weak and is readily attacked by rust and other diseases. Potatoes, sugar beets and other crops storing up large amounts of starch and sugar require an abundance of this element. All peat soils are extremely deficient in this element and until muriate of potash and sulphate of potash are obtainable at reasonable prices the peat land farmer should make use of wood ashes, which contains from 3 to 5 per cent. of this element, most of our upland soils especially those containing clay have large supplies of potassium. In sandy soils the potassium is not readily available, due to the coarseness of the soil particles and a lack of sufficient organic matter to make the proper environment for soil bacteria. Proper tillage, plenty of organic matter, and the right amount of moisture will do much to make available sufficient of this element from the large store already in our soils.—R. S. Goodhue, in Hoard's Dairyman.

CHILDREN FIRST.

"The results of underfeeding or indiscriminate food substitution in childhood are startingly shown abroad as a result of the war and are beginning to be evident in our own great cities." And "milk has no substitute in the diet of the child." These and other unqualified statements of the importance of guarding the milk supply to prevent the physical deterioration of American children during the war are scattered through the latest report of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, and entitled "Milk the Indispensible Food for Children."

This report with its striking figures showing a decrease in the amount of milk now available and in the amount which is finding its way into the homes of poor children has special interest in connection with the campaign to save 100,000 lives of babies and little children during the second year of the war. It not only emphasizes the fact that children who are deprived of milk cannot thrive properly, but it analyzes the changes in the production and exports of dairy products during the war and shows the necessity of public action.

"The nourishment of our children is the first duty of the nation. Since milk and milk products are a vital necessity for children, for nursing mothers and for the sick and injured the public should be made to realize that the children's need for dairy products should be assured."

England and Italy have regulated the sale of cream and curtailed the use of butter in order that their child population might receive the more adequate and economical nourishment offered by whole milk. Germany, early in the war, provided that the adult civil population might have milk only after the needs of children, mothers, invalids and the army were met.

"It is the duty now of every individual community to see that its children have milk of good quality and in sufficient amount to assure their normal development. To do this the price of milk must be controlled or fixed and the milk supply to infants and children carefully guarded. Poverty and ignorance of dairy essentials have been ever present factors in the malnutrition of the young, and war conditions cannot fail to increase the gravity of the situation and the difficulties of maintaining the health of the nation."

RAISE THE FEED ON THE FARM.

We have heard farmers, remarks the Blue Valley Bulletin, give as a reason for not going into the dairy business the statement that they didn't want to buy bran and oil meal in addition to feeding the cows a good share of the grain they were able to raise. They depend upon selling about so many bushels of grain when fall comes and they can't affort to let the cows eat it up. They seem to think that they must raise less grain in order to have time to take care of the cows and that the cows are going to eat up what little grain they can raise. Then, too, they have visions of buying load after load of bran, oil meal, cottonseed meal, etc.

In the first place it is not necessary to let a reasonable number of cows prevent one from raising just as much grain as before. It is reasonable to expect that more grain will be raised on the same number of acres. Then, too, by having the cows drop their calves late in the fall, it is possible to do the heavy part of the year's dairy work at a season when practically no work can be done in the fields. When the work of harvesting and handling the grain crops is heaviest the work of looking after the cows can be made the lightest.

Then again, it is possible to raise such a variety of farm grown products that is is unnecessary to buy mill feed at all. Clover or alfalfa for part of the rough feed will allow the feeding of farm grown grain, such as corn, oats and barley, with excellent results. An ordinarily good cow will pay far more for the grain than the elevator man, and the market is right on the farm. Instead of hauling the grain to town it can be ground and fed to the good dairy cow and the cream can be hauled to town in a top buggy or an automobile.

Of course the number of cows to be kept depends upon how much available help there is on the farm. But we believe it is safe to say that the majority of farmers who are now giving little thought to the production of cream, could keep more cows than they are now keeping with greater profit and with little more work.

BUTTER CAMOUFLAGE.

Commercial devices for mixing milk with butter to make the latter go further should be regarded with caution and used only with the full knowledge that the sale of the resulting product is unlawful. The United States Food Administration has observed with regret the activity of agents and others who have taken advantage of war conditions to exploit butter mergers as the mixing devices are called.

"To make a high class butter having satisfactory keeping qualities, a dairy specialist of the Food Administration points out, good buttermakers remove the buttermilk by thorough washing. If the housewife mixes milk of any kind with the butter, except of course for cooking or for immediate use, she is simply undoing what the skilled buttermaker has taken pains to accomplish. Such a product soon becomes sour in warm weather and wastes the butter it contains.

Where the housewife wishes to extend butter by incorporating milk, cream or other liquids with it, waste may be prevented by mixing just enough for the day's requirements, and for such quantities a rotary egg beater or even a spoon is sufficient equipment.

Any mixing process is of course purely mechanical, adding nothing to the food value of the ingredients, and because of the excess moisture contained in the merged product, it is officially known as adulterated butter. It may be lawfully used in private families, but heavy penalties are attached to its sale.

The results of butter merging are largely psychological. To the eye the process appears to have converted milk into butter. But wartime economy suggests that the milk and butter be consumed separately in the usual manner, allowing the digestive system to do its merging in the natural way.

STORAGE OF FLOURS.

From the Retailer's Journal.

Flours and meals should be stored in clean, cool, dry well-ventilated places; warehouses should be whitewashed and swept clean before these products are placed therein; large supplies should not be accumulated. If too large a stock is on hand, it should be reduced and the flours and meals should be consumed as soon as possible.

Flours and meals which contain the outer bran coatings and germs of the grain will not keep so well as when there are removed. Whole wheat flour sterilized in the process of manufacture will keep much longer than the ordinary whole wheat product. Cornmeal and corn flour made from kiln dried corn and which have the germ removed will keep better than the same products made from corn that has not been so dried and degerminated.

Special care should be taken of the following products and these should be kept moving or used as soon as practicable and should not be allowed to accumulate in the warehouse—bran, shorts and middlings, corn products containing the outer covering and germ, such as so-called water ground cornmeal and grits, etc., oats and oatmeal, graham and whole wheat flours, rye flour, barley flour, peanut meal and soya bean meal.

To prevent flours and meals becoming infested with weevils the outside of bags containing them should be kept clean and swept often. All sweepings from the warehouse should be collected or burned, as these contain most of the adult insects, larvae and eggs. Sacks containing flour should be kept in good repair as this will prevent the insects from entering the bags. Weevils and other insects will not push their way through even the thinnest cotton bagging.

Care should be taken in storing bags of flours and meals to have sufficient space between the tiers to allow abundant ventilation and to raise the bags sufficiently from the floors to exclude rice and rats and insects, also to permit cleaning of the floors without the necessity of transferring the product from one part of the warehouse to another. Insecticides must not be used on products which are to be consumed for food except by experts trained in their use.

FOOD FROM THE FOREST.

It is said that Daniel Boone and some of our other pioneers could go into the wilderness with only a rifle and a sack of salt and live in comfort on the game and other wild food which the woods afforded. While few people want to try that sort of a thing nowadays, persons who know the food values of the fruits of our native trees and shrubs are, according to foresters, able to use them to good advantage in supplementing other foods.

NUTS FIRST IN IMPORTANCE.

Aside from the numerous edible mushrooms, roots, fruits of shrubs and other plants, the trees of our forests supply a large variety of edibles which are highly prized by woods connoisseurs. First in importance are, of course, our native nuts. The kernels of all these are not only toothsome but highly nutritious and are used by vegetarians to replace meat. The oil of the beech nut is said to be little inferior to olive oil while that of the butternuts and walnuts was used by the Indians for some purposes. The Indians, it is said formerly mixed chestnuts with cornmeal and made a bread which was baked in corn husks like tamales. In parts of Europe bread is made from chestnuts alone.

PINES FURNISH EDIBLE SEEDS.

Several western pines have seeds which play an important part in the diet of the local Indians. Perhaps the best known of these is the nut pine or pinon which forms the basis for a local industry of some size. Not only is it extensively eaten by local settlers and Indians, but large quantities are shipped to the cities in regions where they grow and the roasted seed is sold on the street. The similar seed of the Parry pine and the large Digger pine seeds are eagerly sought for by the Indians. The latter tree is said to have gained its name from its use as a food by the Digger Indians.

BREAD FROM ACORNS.

Acorns are commonly thought to be fit only for feeding hogs, but many kinds of them are either sweet enough to eat or can be made edible from an Indian standpoint and have been used as foods particularly when food is scarce. The Indian custom was to pound or grind the acorn and by treating the pulp with water to leach the tannin out which makes most sorts unfit for eating as they grow. The resulting flour, which contained considerable starch, was either made into a porridge or baked into small cakes. Indian acorn bread is dark in color and to most of us would not seem palatable.

MANY USEFUL FRUITS.

One of the best known fruits, the foresters say, is the persimmon, which is edible only after it is thoroughly ripe. As this is usually not until late in the fall it is commonly thought that the fruit must be frost bitten. If the persimmion is eaten before it is well ripened the tannic acid which the fruit contains has a strong astringent effect. The pawpaw, a fruit akin to the custard apple is also best when thoroughly ripe. Studies of this fruit and its uses have been made by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture. The fruit of some species of haws is eaten or preserved in different parts of the country while those of several kinds of wild cherries and currants have a food value and are used for various purposes.—Weekly News Letter.

PRODUCE CLEAN MILK.

Reduction of bacteria in milk does not depend upon the kind of a barn or expensive equipment so much as upon simple, inexpensive precautions. Milk with low bacterial count can be produced in barns of ordinary type with less than $20 worth of extra equipment. The dairy specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have proved this in a practical experiment.

For the purposes of this experiment four cows were put in an ordinary frame barn. An untrained worker was employed to work and care for the animals. No extra attention was devoted to cleaning the barn. At the end of six months the barn was no cleaner than many commercial barns.

WHAT THE SMALL-TOP PAIL DID.

Without any changes in barn management the specialists had two cows milked into small-top pails and the two others were milked into ordinary open-top pails. The milk from the open-top pails averaged 497,653 bacteria. The milk from the small-top pails averaged 368,214.

The use of a small-top pail without any extra precaution made a difference in the average count of 129,439 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

STEAMING UTENSILS DEATH TO BACTERIA.

The pails and cans were sterilized with live steam, which can easily and cheaply be done with a simple steam sterilizer which can be made at home or purchased complete for $10. Other conditions remained as before. The milk from the sterilized small-top pails averaged only 17.027 bacteria, a reduction of 351,187 in favor of this simple sterilization. With the open pails sterilization reduced the bacteria to 22,677, a decrease of 474,976, compared with milk from the unsterilized open pails.

SIMPLE CLEANLINESS LOWERS COUNT.

In the third step of the experiment the manure was removed from the barn twice instead of once a week. The udders and teats of the cows were washed before each milking. These reasonable measures of cleanliness reduced the count of milk drawn into the sterilized small-top pails to 2,866 bacteria and in the sterilized open-top pail to 6,166 per cubic centimeter. Ordinary cleanliness, it can be seen, caused a reduction of over 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. To make it easier to keep the cows clean, in the final stages of the experiment the manure was removed daily, clean bedding was supplied, and the cows were cleaned with a currycomb and brush. Farmers interested in improving the quality of milk can get further information from the Dairy Division, United States Department of Agriculture.

FEED THE YOUNG CHILD MILK.

At a conference of the National Dairy Industry held in Chicago a committee was appointed to confer with Food Administration officials. This committee has urged the Food Administration to announce again its policy with regard to milk, and in response the Food Administration has issued the following:

KEEP MILK IN DIET.

"For the proper nourishment of the child it is essential that milk should be kept in the diet as long as possible. Not only does it contain all the essential food elements in the most available form for ready digestion, but the recent scientific discoveries show it to be especially rich in certain peculiar properties that alone render growth possible.

"This essential quality makes it also of especial value in the sick room. In hospitals it has also been shown that the wounded recover more rapidly when they have milk.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR BUTTERFAT.

"For the purpose of stimulating growth, and especially in children, butterfat has no substitute. During last winter when much agitation arose in some of the larger cities over the price of milk, which was advanced from two to three cents a quart by reason of the rapid rise in the cost of feed and labor, many families among the poorer classes were found giving their children tea and coffee instead of milk. Such methods of feeding fail to nourish the child properly. The widest possible publicity should be carried on through public channels to bring these essential facts to the attention of all mothers.

EXAMPLE OF GERMANY.

"In spite of the shortage of milk in Germany, that country has at all hazards maintained the milk ration of the children and in the hospitals, even though to do so has meant that the adult population has had to forego largely its use. In a 'safety first' campaign it must be remembered that it should be 'children first.'"

STARVE OUT THE RATS.

If some pied piper could lead our entire army of rats and mice into the sea and the annual loss caused by these pests be invested in thrift stamps there would be enough to give two five-dollar stamps to every man, woman and child in the United States. While we are counting every bushel of wheat and making large use of substitutes, that we may have enough war bread to go around and that our allies may not starve, 200,000,000 rats fatten from the best products of the land. They feed upon the grain in the field, in the shock, the stack, the crib and bin, elevator and mill, car and ship, grocery and pantry. They contaminate and destroy ten times as much as they eat.

The average corn and wheat crops of the United States are 2,750,000,000 and 740,000,000 bushels, respectively. The percentage of profit on this vast production is small. The margin of gain to the farmer and dealer is reduced and the cost to the consumer is increased by the depreciation caused by these filthy parasites. We cannot depend upon their few natural enemies and the traps and poisons to exterminate this nuisance. So rapidly do they breed that their numbers continue large in spite of these half-way measures for their elimination. In addition to these methods for destroying the rodents we should starve them by storing grain and other food in rat-proof cribs, bins and other containers. Buildings should be made rat-proof by a judicious used of concrete and metal. Not one bushel of grain should be stored where the rats and mice may feed upon it. A good war-time slogan: "Millions of bushels of grain for our allies but not one bushel for the rats and mice."—Charles E. Thorne, Ohio Experiment Station.

FROZEN FISH VALUABLE FOOD.

The business of freezing and storing fish and the commodity itself, when properly handled has received the commendation of the United States Department of Agriculture in a recent publication describing an investigation recently made of the industry.

"Freezing and freezer storage will hold fish for many months in the condition in which they were received," says the bulletin, "but will not repair deterioration due to previous heating or mishandling.

"Properly frozen fish reach the retailer in excellent condition. He should keep them hard frozen until they are sold. The practice of thawing fish by warming or in water greatly lessens their food value and flavor.

"Chemical analyses show no significant changes in fish held 27 months or for a period much longer than would be necessary or profitable in storing fish commercially."

Recent experiments carried on by the department show that fish have a high food value and deserve an important place in the dietary.

PUSH SUMMER SEA FOODS NOW.

From the Retailers' Journal.

No other land on the face of the globe is blessed with such an abundance of all manner of sea foods as is the United States.

And in a just proportion to nature's bounty to us are we to blame for the stupid indifference of the American people to these most excellent foods.

We consume less sea food per capita as a nation than any other country in the world.

Take the retail grocer as an example of this indifference.

Let a customer come into his store and "wonder what she will buy" for luncheon. Customers do this very thing every day in the week.

How often do you hear the retailer or his clerks suggest one of the excellent canned sea foods.

Not once a month.

Why?

Because, partly for some fool reason he cannot himself explain, he considers that these foods are intended only for Friday, and that, like castor oil, or jalap, they must be asked for by the customer before being referred to by the man behind the counter.

As a matter of fact, there is every reason in the world why retail grocers should display, push and exploit their stock of canned sea foods and not a single reason that can possibly justify their inexplicable policy of shrouding this department in mystery.

The American people do not consume sea foods in proportion to the country's supply for the same reason that they do not consume many other equally wholesome, appetising and nutritious foods; for the reason is that they do not know anything or but very little about them and their availability.

If you would suggest canned sea foods to your "wondering" customers, telling them how simply they are prepared for the table, nine times out of ten you would register a sale.

Do you believe it? Try it. We know. This is not a fairy story. Show your canned foods intelligently and you will sell them, not on Fridays or during the lenten season, but throughout the entire cycle of the year.

The best lobsters are produced in our eastern waters and are now being cultivated artificially for market.

They have, in later years, become an expensive luxury—almost an extravagance in the average home. The fresh lobster is far superior to his canned brother, although there is no need of the retailer advising or reminding his customers of the fact. The canned product develops a pungency which is agreeably lacking in the fresh article. Canners may argue against this fact, but the fact remains, none the less, a fact.

An article which meets with instant favor whenever made into a salad and which is in the retailer's power to develop into a heavy seller is canned shrimp. There is none of the tinny, pungent flavor here, that is so noticable in canned lobster and, furthermore, the price is within reach of all classes of pocketbooks.

A great delicacy which has come to be recognized during the past few years in this country is the albacore, or tuna fish.

All retailers, practically, carry a stock of tuna fish nowadays "so as to have it if anyone asks for it."

Cases upon cases of this food could be sold over your counters if you would only open up and try to do something for yourself by way of pushing your goods.

Tuna is at its best when served as a salad. It has been called chicken of the sea. As a matter of fact it tastes about as much like chicken as does a cherry pie.

It is a delicious viand in itself and by itself. So is chicken. The two have absolutely no link of resemblance or relationship. One is a fish and the other a fowl.

Mussels are a delicious bivalve, of which exceedingly little is known in these parts. In the east many epicures prefer mussels to oysters and clams.

The terrapin is a turtle and is now so expensive that its exploitation of late years has been limited largely to Johnnies and their fair ones.

Salmon has long been a staple on the American table and deservedly so. Price has been soaring steadily on this commodity since the beginning of the war, but as there is mighty little waste to a can of salmon, retailers, bringing home this point to their customers, may still do a good sales business of this excellent commodity.

In the east clams are an exceedingly popular dish.

They are served "steamed" or made into chowders.

The broth of the clam is considered a great delicacy and, besides being a favorite on the table, is given freely to invalids and convalescents as an appetizer and a tonic.

The clam broth is put up in cans as are also the clams themselves and there is no reason in the world why retail grocers should not do a good business on this item alone, as there are few people who do not quickly develop a taste for clams.

Crabs also come in the hard and soft shell varieties. The soft shell crab is the hard shell crab in disguise. He has discarded his hard shell for the purpose of taking another.

Crab meat is simply what the term signifies, the sweet white meat of the crab, picked from the shell and put up in tins for commercial use.

Crab meat is made use of principally in salad and is a good seller when properly brought to the attention of the customer. It comes a little high but, as in the case of salmon, entails no waste.

PREVENTION OF MOLD IN TUB BUTTER.

From the Creamery Journal.

Considerable quantities of moldy butter are reported to be arriving in the butter markets at the present time. The resulting losses to creameries and shippers from moldy butter are considerable, for when moldy butter reaches the market it must be taken from the tub and the mold removed before the butter can be sold. The cost of labor to do this, besides the resulting loss in weight of the butter must be borne by the shipper.

Investigations conducted by the Dairy Division of Animal Industry showed that the proper paraffining of butter tubs practically prevented the development of mold in tub butter.

In preparing butter tubs for paraffining they should be thoroughly cleaned and soaked, preferably in brine, that they may be thoroughly saturated. The tubs should then be heated, scalded or steamed to the proper temperature—about 240 degrees F. The paraffine should be quickly applied and should be hot enough to penetrate the wood slightly before cooling or crystallizing, thus giving a smooth thin layer over the inside of the tub which will not peel off or stick to the butter when removed from the tub. The paraffine may be applied with a soft brush or poured into the tub and the latter revolved by a specially designed machine which sprays the heated paraffine thoroughly over the inside of the tub. Very satisfactory results may be obtained by either method when properly done, although special paraffining machines require less time to apply the paraffine and produce a thinner film on the tub, which results in a saving of both labor and material.

Creameries should take every precaution possible to prevent the development of mold in their butter. The cost of paraffining butter tubs may slightly exceed 3 cents a tub, while the proper paraffining of the tub makes it practically impervious to water so there is less shrinkage in the weight of the butter between the creamery and the market, the economy and desirability of properly paraffiing the butter tubs in creameries should be evident to every progressive buttermaker and creameryman.

SUGAR.

The wholesale price of refined sugar in the United States at the present time (July) is $7.30 per 100 pounds. The regulated wholesale price in Canada is $8.07 per 100 pounds; in the United Kingdom $12.59; in France $12.28; and in Italy $26.30.

Canada's consumption of sugar for the year ending March 31 was 352,000 tons. The consumption of France in 1916 was 570,621 tons; the consumption of the United Kingdom was 1,565,599 tons, and the consumption of Italy was 276,953 tons.

The total consumption of the four countries was 2,765,373 tons, the total cost of which was $736,884,703, or an average cost per ton of all sugar consumed in the four allied countries of $266.47. Had the sugar consumption of the United States been paid for at this price, the total would have been $1,095,002,772. The cost of the sugar consumption of the United States for one year at the prevailing price of $146 per ton will amount to $599,956,486.

If sugar consumption of the United States for the coming year remains at the same figures as that for last year, the saving as compared with price prevailing in the four allied countries will total $495,046,286.

DO NOT WASH EGGS.

Approximately 5,016,000 dozen eggs spoil every year in cold storage simply because someone has let clean eggs get wet or has washed dirty eggs before sending them to market according to the specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Careful investigation of large quantities of stored eggs show that from 17 to 22 per cent. of the stored eggs become worthless in storage, whereas only 4 to 8 per cent. of the dirty eggs stored unwashed will spoil. The explanation is simple. Water removes from the shell of the egg a gelatinous substance which helps to keep air and germs out of the inside of the egg. Once this covering is removed by washing or rain which gets to eggs in the nest, germs and molds find ready access to the contents and spoil the egg.

The enormous loss in storage eggs largely can be prevented if producers and egg handlers, especially during March, April and May, will refrain from washing eggs destined for the storage markets, and take pains to reduce the number of dirty eggs by providing plenty of clean sheltered nests for their hens.

Millions of eggs spoil in storage because they have been exposed to dew, rain, dirt and sun in stolen nests in the grass of fence corners.

In view of this great loss of valuable food, the department urges country storekeepers and hucksters not to accept washed eggs for shipment in case lots. Shiny eggs, specially in the early spring, probably have been washed. All washed eggs purchased should be sold locally for immediate consumption.

SAVING CALVES IN CHEESE SECTIONS.

Not in all dairy sections in which the product of the herds goes into cheese, condensed milk, and market milk are the calves sacrificed on account of the absence of skimmilk on which to raise them. Tillamook county, the great cheese section of Oregon, furnishes a striking exception to the rule against "race suicide" in dairy cattle. Several weeks ago while waiting for a train in the Southern Pacific station in Sacramento our attention was attracted by an express shipment of calves that was being transferred from one train to another. Our curiosity aroused, we looked further and to our surprise found that they were very young, not over ten days old, and all heifers. Altogether there were twelve in the crates. An examination of the shipping tags revealed that they were consigned to parties in Nevada and were shipped by "Smith the Calf Man" from Tillamook, Oregon.

Since then we have found out more about Smith and his campaign for conserving the Tillamook heifer calves. The Tillamook dairymen receive almost marvelous prices for their milk from the cheese factories, so good, in fact, are the prices that they feel that it is cheaper to buy cows than to raise them on valuable milk and on their valuable pasture lands. So for many years the heifer calves as well as the males were either dispatched at birth or went to the veal buyers. But since Smith has appeared on the scene the Tillamook heifers have been saved. To all parts of the coast he ships these youngsters, the Nevada lot being only one example. In 1917 he saved in this way the lives of 3,160 calves and since he started four years ago, he has shipped 11,646 head. Smith offers to take all the calves that are brought to him for which he pays from $1 up according to quality. If he can make no other use of the calf he kills it and saves the hide. The promising ones he selects to fill his orders, and it is reported that not infrequently they include calves from registered cows, so eager are the Tillamook dairymen to carry no stock except cows in milk. Whether Smith profits very much by it is not in the report, but that he is a real conservationist and engaged in a most laudable, and we may say, patriotic enterprise goes without saying.—Pacific Dairy Review.

WHY SAVE FOOD.

Except for the Central powers none of Europe's nations are producing food in sufficient quantities to sustain existence, should they be cut off entirely from outside supplies. Their farmers are in the trenches. Their farms are battlefields. Their plows have been wrought into arms and their plow horses are hauling cannon. Even before the war they were not self-supporting. Germany was less dependent upon imports than any other European nation—she obtained only about one-fifth of her food from other nations, France more than one-half and Italy more than a third.

Germany's entire system of autocratic militarism made the nation more amenable to immediate food control than any of the countries with which she is at war. With a system that had instilled in the people the conviction that before anything else came military efficiency, it was not so difficult for Germany to take charge of supply and distribution to such an extent that with barely enough to meet actual demands, every single body could be given the food it required to maintain strength and health.

And in addition she is now in control of the fertile fields of the Danube and the western fringe of Russia. Germany has made prisoners of war till the fields and help to feed the German people. More than any other nation Germany was prepared to meet the complex problems of the war, prepared to maintain food supply on a level that could be met by reduced consumption. The rest of Europe was not prepared. Without help from across the seas the rest of Europe would have starved long ago, will starve before the war is over unless that help can be continued and increased.

Those people must be fed. The toll of the U-boats and the unusual demands of the war have made such a drain upon the world's shipping tonnage that every vessel must be kept in the shortest possible trade routes. If America alone could supply all of Europe's needs it could be done with one-third of the number of ships that would be needed if the entire supply had to come from Australia, one-half what would be needed if Europe had to depend entirely upon the Argentine. Thus it is evident that every ship we take out of the Australian trade virtually trebles the available tonnage, because it can make three times as many trips to America. Or every ship we take from the Argentine channels doubles Europe's import capacity, because it can make twice as many trips to an American port.

The Allies must be fed—so America must feed them. There is only one way we can do this. We must save their food from our normal consumption. By the first of the year we had sent to Europe our entire surplus of wheat from the 1917 crop. And Europe is still crying for millions of bushels of wheat.

Europe's appeal is a cry from old men, women and children. They have given their all to their soldiers and will continue to give their all until the last one has found relief in the grave. These soldiers will be fed somehow even if it means that the women and children in Europe must go hungry. It is to keep strong and healthy the people behind the lines that America must tighten her belt and send every available ounce of food abroad. Thousands of them will starve unless the individual American awakes to his responsibilities and carries the war into every home in the United States. What the individual can save, even what one family can save, seems comparatively little when we think in terms of millions of bushels and thousands of tons. But if we remember that there are 22,000,000 tables in this country, and that at these tables 110,000,000 mouths are fed, it is not hard to realize that an ounce or so here and there will soon make the millions of tons and bushels that will save the allies from starvation.

No army can maintain its strength if the men at the front begin to fear that the old and infirm, the wives and mothers, sisters and brothers, little children and babies back home are not being cared for. If the men in the trenches should be weakened by the thought that the people behind them were starving to death our first line of defense would begin to move toward Washington instead of toward Berlin. The armies would lose heart, and losing heart would be no more than tin soldiers before the ruthless horde of Huns.

If we want our boys to cross the Rhine instead of to recross the Atlantic, we must feed the Allies. We must send them food in concentrated form, food that will give the greatest possible nutritive value in the least possible shipping space. Their most pressing need is for wheat—millions of bushels of it. There is only one way we can send it—by saving.

Democracy will have to find its justification at America's 22,000,000 tables. The way we eat will be democracy's answer to the slur that democracy is not competent to deal with war. There is food enough for all if we will conserve. We must give Europe our concentrated foods and content ourselves with the many palatable substitutes offered by America.—Dr. Hammond Pearl, United States Food Administration.

PASTEURIZATION OF CREAM FOR BUTTERMAKING.

The following extract from an article by J. J. Brunner is taken from a recent issue of the Creamery Journal:

The subject of pasteurization of cream for buttermaking is one of the most important confronting the American buttermakers today. With the constant agitation of the necessity of pasteurization of all dairy products by the boards of health in practically every large city in the country * * * it is high time for the American buttermakers to recognize pasteurization of cream for the manufacture of butter, not merely as a practice but as a necessity. * * * * Pasteurization is already extensively practiced. Creamery managers are beginning to recognize the fact that the market is demanding a higher grade and a more uniform quality of butter, results made possible by proper pasteurization.

Although regrettable, it is a fact that the change from the whole milk to the hand separator system of buttermaking has resulted in a decline in the quality of butter. This is due to the fact that under the whole milk system is was impossible for the buttermaker to handle milk which was sour when delivered and consequently the farmer was compelled to deliver it more frequently and in good sweet condition. But under the hand separator system we find that at most creameries the cream is delivered anywhere from one to 10 or 15 days old and consequently is in a very poor condition when it arrives at the factory.

If a buttermaker has no competitor who will receive cream of a poor quality he will probably reject it, but on the other hand, in nine cases out of ten he will receive it if his competitor does and the result will be that sooner or later he will be looking for another job. The creamery is obliged in this way to produce butter of such poor quality that finally it must close its doors. Prices paid the farmers for butterfat have not been high enough to make the dairy business a paying proposition for him so he quits the old cow and perhaps goes into some other line of business.

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED IN MAY AND JUNE.

The Dairy and Food Division of the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture during the month of May ordered 288 prosecutions against dealers in various parts of the state for violations of the rules of the Department.

Offenders against the cream and milk regulations were the most numerous, 242 prosecutions having been brought as follows: Sale of cream, low in butterfat, 35; milk, preserved with formaldehyde, 1; milk, low in fat and solids and preserved with formaldehyde, 1; milk, low in fat and solids, skimmed and watered, 3; milk, low in solids, watered, 6; milk, low in fat, 10; milk, low in fats and solids, partially skimmed, 11; milk, watered, 14; milk, low in fat and solids, watered, 21; milk, low in fat and solids, 140. These prosecutions were brought in Allegheny, Beaver, Berks, Blair, Cambria, Cameron, Clearfield, Columbia, Crawford, Dauphin, Elk, Erie, Fayette. Franklin, Huntingdon, Indiana, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, McKean, Mifflin, Northampton, Northumberland, Philadelphia, Schuylkill, Somerset, Susquehanna, Union, Venango, Washington, Wayne and Westmoreland Counties.

Fifteen dealers in Philadelphia county were prosecuted for offenses against the Pure Food laws as follows: Sale of sliced peaches unfit for food purposes, 1; candy, unfit for food purposes, 1; eggs, unfit for food purposes, 1; potato flour containing 50 per cent. of tapioca flour, 1; potato flour, consisting entirely of cornstarch, 1; currant biscuits colored with a coal tar dye in imitation of eggs, 1; egg noodles, colored with coal tar dye, in imitation of eggs, 1; cakes, colored with a coal tar dye, in imitation of eggs, 2; powdered gelatin, containing an excess of sulphur dioxide, 2; powdered gelatin, containing an excess of sulphur dioxide and arsenic, 2; vanilla extract, an imitation extract sold for pure, 2.

Cambria and Clearfield counties furnished 13 prosecutions for violations of the soft drink regulations as follows: Sale of strawberry pop, misbranded, artificially colored, containing no strawberry, 1; sale of cider, sweet, contained 7.30 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider, sweet, contained 6.31 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider, sweet, contained 5.84 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider, sweet, contained 5.76 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider, sweet, contained 6.65 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider, contained 6.78 per cent. of alcohol and colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, sweet, contained 3.68 per cent. alcohol, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, sweet, contained 2.64 per cent. alcohol and colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, cherry, contained 3.38 per cent. alcohol, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, cherry, contained 6.54 per cent. alcohol, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, grape, contained 3.40 per cent. alcohol, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, grape, contained 6.37 per cent. alcohol, colored with coal tar dye, 1.

Twelve ice cream dealers were prosecuted for selling vanilla ice cream low in fat, the prosecutions having been brought in Cambria, Crawford, McKean, Philadelphia, Venango and Wayne counties.

Five dealers were prosecuted in Elk and Philadelphia counties for violations of the oleomargarine regulations—one for the sale of oleomargarine without license and not properly marked, and 4 for the sale of oleo without a license.

Seventy-eight prosecutions were ordered by the department for the month of June—210 less than were ordered brought in May. As usual violations of the milk and cream regulations were the most numerous, 48 offenders being prosecuted under this head. They were for the sale of cream, low in fat, 7; milk, low in fat, partially skimmed, 1; low in fat and solids, partially skimmed, 1; low in solids, watered, 2; low in fat and solids, watered, 4; watered, 6; low in fat and solids, skimmed, 4; low in fat and solids, 23. These prosecutions were ordered brought in Allegheny, Butler, Cambria, Cumberland, Dauphin, Erie, Fayette, Indiana, Northumberland, Philadelphia, Westmoreland and York counties.

Allegheny, Lawrence, Philadelphia, Washington and Wayne counties furnished sixteen violations of the Pure Food rules as follows, for the sale of goods which did not come up to requirements:

Sale of cornmeal, contained ground glass, 1; sale of veal loaf, contained ground glass, 1; sale of meat, contained ground glass, 2; sale of bread crumbs, contained ground glass, 5; sale of butter containing an excessive amount of water, 2; sale of cherries, contained sulphur dioxide, 1; marmalade, unfit for food purposes, 1; strawberry shortcake, colored yellow with a coal tar dye in imitation of eggs, 1; cakes, colored yellow with a coal tar dye in imitation of eggs, 2.

One Philadelphia county dealer was prosecuted for selling skimmilk cheese for pure cream cheese. For selling chocolate ice cream low in fat an Indiana county dealer was prosecuted, and a Blair county merchant had to answer for selling oleomargarine, colored. Two Philadelphia county merchants were prosecuted for the sale of eggs, unfit for food, and three Luzerne and Somerset county dealers were prosecuted for violations of the rules regulating the sale of vinegar.

Six violators of the soft drink rules were prosecuted in Cambria, Centre, Jefferson, Philadelphia and Somerset counties, as follows: Sale of cherry cider, contained 2.95 per cent. alcohol, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; sale of cherry cider, contained 5.45 per cent. alcohol, 1; cherry cider, artificially colored and flavored in imitation of cherry, 1; pear soda, artificially colored and flavored, in imitation of pear, 1; strawberry pop, misbranded, artificially colored and flavored, contained no strawberry, 1; merlbrew, misbranded, 1.

MEASURES FOR PROTECTING WHEAT-FLOUR SUBSTITUTES FROM INSECTS.

From Science.

Readers of Science may be interested in work being done to prevent the loss of wheat-flour substitutes due to insect attack. Many of the millers and dealers who handle the cereals which the Food Administration is now requiring as substitutes for wheat flour have always recognized them as being subject to insect attack to such a degree that it has been considered poor policy to handle them extensively during the summer months.

The amount of embryo which is included in a flour, and the coarseness of the product are usually taken as an index of susceptibility to insect attack, coarse flours with the most embyro being the most susceptible. The wheat-flour substitutes and other cereals contain embryo, are relatively coarse, and are known to be highly susceptible to insect attack.

Millers, dealers and consumers will handle more of the susceptible cereals than usual this summer and unless unusual care is taken to protect them, the requirement of the Food Administration may result in an increased loss of food and thus defeat the object of the government. However, such losses can be prevented and, if proper precautions are taken, the handling of wheat-flour substitutes need not lead to serious complications with insect pests. The division of entomology and economic zoology in co-operation with the department of animal biology at the University of Minnesota, and the Minnesota State Food Administration have been outlining recommendations and methods for aiding the millers, dealers and consumers of Minnesota in preventing losses of wheat-flour substitutes. The measures are preventive and it is proposed to cover the state with propaganda before any serious trouble has arisen.

The millers are probably the best prepared for the new conditions. The operators of the large flour mills in Minneapolis have learned from experience that these cereals must be carefully handled and they were the first to anticipate complications arising from the war-time emergency. The cereals which are put upon the market in sacks are not permitted to remain in storage but are hastened to the consumer, if possible, in less time than is required for the development of the insects beyond the egg stage.

The cereals which go out in sealed packages are heated to about 85 degrees C. at the time of packing. This temperature will kill all stages of insects and if the packages are tightly sealed such products are practically free from insects' attack, unless thay are stored in badly infested places. When the insects have access to packages, they will enter through any cracks which they may find and in cases of bad infestation they will make holes through the wrappers and boxes. To protect themselves against losses while these cereals are in the possession of retail dealers, many of the large milling concerns are turning the cereals over to the dealers with only a "sound on delivery" agreement.

It is with the retail dealers and the consumers that this work is particularly concerned. With the millers protecting themselves by rapid transit and the "sound on delivery" agreement the liability of loss devolves upon the retail dealers and the consumers. The retail dealers and consumers must protect themselves against the introduction of undeveloped insects in the cereals. In many of the retail stores where proper precautions are not taken the insects are present and ready to infest the sacked cereal and even that in sealed packages may be destroyed or infested with eggs. Cereals not destroyed in the store may contain eggs which either did not hatch during the short period after leaving the mill or were deposited while in the infested store. The result is that the homes are very apt to become infested.

Dealers are recommended to adopt the miller's policy of rapid handling of cereals and to take proper precautions in the sanitation of their stores. Instructions are being sent out to the dealers emphasizing the responsibility resting on those who handle wheat-flour substitutes and warning them of the serious losses which may result if they permit the cereals to be exposed to insect attack.

Consumers are instructed to buy small quantities of cereal, to avoid "sealed package" cereals when the packages are broken or contain holes, to heat "sacked cereals" just as soon as they are taken home, and to use great care in storing all wheat-flour substitutes. If the millers and dealers are able to eliminate their loss by the rapid handling of cereals the loss which our country will experience will depend upon what the consumer does to eliminate loss after the cereal reaches him.

The heating of the cereal to kill any stages of insects which it may contain will protect the consumer against the infestation of the home and in addition it will reduce to the minimum the loss caused by cereal insects. A method of heating cereals in the oven has been simplified and standardized as a result of a series of experienments on heat conduction in cereals and fatal temperatures of the insects infesting them.

The problem in heating is to obtain a condition in which the minimum temperature in any part of the cereal is well above the fatal temperature of the insects, about 45° C. at 24 per cent. of relative humidity. At the same time the temperature in the hottest part must be kept well below the heat which will injure the cereal, about 94° C. This can be done by placing the cereal in pans about two inches deep and heating it in the oven until the surface of the cereal reaches 85° C. At this point the fire should be turned out, in the case of gas, gasolene, or kerosene ovens, and the cereal should be left in the closed oven for forty-five minutes. If a coal or wood stove is used, the oven door should be opened when the top of the cereal reaches 85° C. and the fire should be kept low during the forty-five minutes. Temperature curves representing the temperature of the top, center and bottom of such a pan of cereal show that the center of the cereal reaches a temperate between 55° and 60° C. and that it remains above the fatal temperature for insects for about half an hour.

Since thermometers which indicate high temperatures are not in reach of all housewives, a wax has been standardized to melt between 82° and 85° C., and is to be manufactured under the direction of the Food Administration. The wax is furnished in small pieces packed in boxes which will cost the consumer five cents for a season's supply and is to be distributed to the retail dealers through the jobbers. The directions are very simple and explicit, for one has only to place some wax upon a piece of paper on top of the cereal and heat until the pieces of wax melts to a grease spot which will be 85° C. Then it is recommended that the cereal be mixed and left in the oven for forty-five minutes, as stated above.

Warnings with regard to the proper storage of the cereal after it has been heated make it clear that the cereal will remain free from insects only when stored where no insects can get at it.

The cereals used in the heating experiments have been submitted to various cooking processes by the department of domestic science at the University of Minnesota and no injury was apparent even when the cereals were heated to a temperature of 95° C.

This work has been undertaken in anticipation of a condition which seems very certain to develop. With the co-operation of the millers in "sterilizing" and rapidly handling the cereals, of the dealers in increased sanitation and in furnishing consumers with "heat-testing wax," and finally of the consumer in heating the cereal when it reaches him, it is hoped that our country may be aided in its effort to conserve the food needed to win this war. Similar campaigns in other states might aid in reducing a loss which seems inevitable if no unusual measures are taken.

CONCERNING OLEO LICENSE FEES.

From The Modern Merchant and Grocery World.

Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust dropped into my office last week to discuss the recent article in this paper regarding the reduction of the $100 retail oleo license prevailing in this State. After sitting down he spoke thus: "There are at present about 4,000 retail oleo licenses in Pennsylvania, twenty times as many as twelve years ago, when I became Commissioner. At that time oleo was regarded as a cheap and fraudulent imitation of butter, and it was in the hands of crooks all over the State. I helped to put some of them in jail, and gradually the crookedness has been eliminated from the business. There is almost no crookedness in the sale of oleo in Pennsylvania to-day. Why? Because the $100 license fee has confined its sale to a better class of dealers. If you reduce the fee you open the door to anybody to sell it, and in a little while it will be back in the hands of the crooks and the foreigners, and as sure as you live will soon be a fraudulent business again. The license doesn't raise the price to the consumer anyway—it represents only one-eighth cent a pound on the consumption. It is perfectly right for the product to be supervised, and to pay the cost of supervision."

This argument is not new. I have heard it many times before. In fact, some of the oleo manufacturers themselves believe in it and advance it. As I told the Commissioner, it is a strong argument, but it is selfish, wholly selfish! It considers only the interest of the large dealers. The small but honest dealer, who could sell but a few pounds of oleo a week, can't afford to pay $100 a year for a license and therefore has to stay out of the business. If the product is not legitimate, if it can't stand on its own feet, if it has no rightful place, then let's get rid of it. But if it is legitimate, as nobody now denies that it is, then I say again, there appears to be nothing but a selfish reason for tying it up with heavy restrictions. Some restrictions you may have, yet, but not $100 a year to sell it at retail. For $5 a year a man gets a license to drive a motor car, with which he can and does do murder. But to sell oleo, a staple and valuable food product, he must pay $100 a year! While the analogy is a little strained, there is some logic in it. It isn't a fair situation.

COMMENTS ON ABOVE.

Commissioner Foust says regarding the friendly criticism of the editor of the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World," that in France oleomargarine has to be sold in stores where no butter is sold, and the fact that oleomargarine is sold there must be stated to the public in letters across the store front a foot high. In this county oleomargarine is made in roll form like buter, in print form like butter, in tub form like butter, and sold over the same counter that butter is sold over. Hence the opportunity for fraud and deception. The $100 a year retail license fee and the enforcement of a good, comprehensive law in Pennsylvania have driven the crooks out of the oleo business and placed it in the hands of reputable merchants. It has done more than that. It has increased the sale and consumption of oleomargarine until Pennsylvania is the greatest market for the product in the United States. This can be verified by manufacturers and wholesale dealers.

Twelve years ago, when there were so many prosecutions in every section of the State and the product and business were discredited, the consuming public was afraid to purchase oleomargarine for consumption, as they believed that it was not wholesome. This prejudice has all been eliminated. Oleomargarine is recognized as a wholesome article of food, but it is not butter. It should make its own market and sell at its own price. The price of oleomargarine is regulated by the demand and price of butter. In Phillipsburg, New Jersey, just across the river from Easton, Pennsylvania, oleomargarine is retailed at exactly the same price that it is sold for in Easton. The state of New Jersey requires no license, and this fact does not reduce the price there, which is conclusive that if the retail license fee was entirely eliminated, the consumer would pay the same price for oleomargarine as he pays under the retail license fee as it now exists; but if the license fee is eliminated, thousands of irresponsible people would engage in the business, and many of them could not understand the law. Prosecutions would naturally follow in every county of the State. The business, as well as the product, would become discredited, and the consuming public would get a wrong impression and be afraid to purchase the product for consumption, and the various counties would spend more than the license fees amount to in trying cases in the courts for violations of the law. In one year the consumption of oleomargarine in Pennsylvania would drop 50 per cent.

There should be no change in the present law for the following reasons:

1. The law is working admirably and there are practically no prosecutions.

2. Oleomargarine is an imitation product, susceptible to fraud and deception, and should be under state supervision. The license fee is to cover all expenses of supervision incident thereto.

3. Oleomargarine manufacturers and wholesale dealers are perfectly satisfied with the present license system in Pennsylvania and the consuming public is protected against deception.

4. There is twice as much oleomargarine consumed in Pennsylvania per capita as in any other state in the Union, which is positive proof that our regulative law is a success.

5. Twelve years ago there were scarcely any licenses east of the Allegheny Mountains and only one retail license in Philadelphia. To-day there are 300 in Philadelphia and every city, town, village and hamlet has a retail license where there is a demand for the product. The license fee doesn't amount to one-eighth of a cent a pound on the quantity of the product sold during the year.

6. If the license fee is eliminated, crooks and irresponsible people will engage in the oleo business; moonshining will start in cellars and other unsanitary places by unsanitary people coloring the product and selling it for butter and at butter prices.

7. Pennsylvania has the best oleomargarine law of any state in the Union. There is more of the product sold in Pennsylvania than in any other state, and the law should remain as it is.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The exports of condensed milk for February were something over 21,000,000 pounds, while the exports for January were over 40,000,000 pounds. These figures make us realize what the shutting off of exports of condensed milk products will mean to the industry, and indicates that a large share of this surplus milk must be worked up in some other shape rather than condensed and canned.

Figures given out by the Government bring out some interesting information in regard to advances in prices on different commodities. On an average all commodities have advanced 81 per cent. from 1913 to 1918. Farm products have advanced 104 per cent. Lumber and building material have advanced but 35 per cent. Relatively speaking, then, the price of building is not as high as other things and those industries which have received the advances on their commodities would be able to build cheaper, relatively, than several years ago.

Standardization of dairy products is receiving considerable attention at this time. It has been done in other countries for a long time with resulting profit but in this country, with our home markets, not so much attention has been paid to it. It has been equally true in Canada until recently, when a considerable effort has been made to standardize their butter, particularly in the northwestern district.

Every scrub animal on the farm is a slacker, whether it be a hog, cow or chicken. It is better to keep a few good ones than a whole lot of poor ones that eat their heads off.

Cottage cheese should be eaten in generous quantities, not as a relish but as a food. It is a satisfactory substitute, pound for pound, for lean meat and eggs, if the iron that it lacks is provided elsewhere in the meal in the form of salads, greens, vegetables, whole cereals breads and breakfast foods.

An ice cream concern in Spokane has effected a marked savings in sugar by using six pounds of strained honey and three pounds of sugar to forty-six pounds of milk and cream in its mix. While honey costs a little more than sugar, it makes a fine grade of ice cream, this concern reports, and the saving of sugar justifies a little extra outlay for the substitute sweetener.

One hundred hens on every farm—100 eggs to every hen. This is the slogan adopted by some of the government poultry men in charge of the work under way to encourage greater production of poultry, meat and eggs. The average size of the farm flock in the United States is only forty hens. It is estimated that an average of 100 hens would increase the poultry supply 6,500,000 pounds this coming year. Some farms can have several hundred, while others should keep less. A pound of poultry meat can be produced more quickly and with less cost for feed than any other. The average chick will increase its weight from twenty to twenty-five times or more in the first twelve weeks. Can you beat it with hogs, or cattle, or sheep? Do you wonder that the Government is urging maximum poultry raising?—Everybody's Poultry Magazine.

Every farm in the country has a flock of poultry, and many families in towns and cities maintain them. With the present high price of eggs a more general interest should be taken in poultry raising. Pure bred poultry is the most profitable.

The United States Bureau of Fisheries has recommended the eulachon or candle fish as one of the finest food fishes in the world. It is said to be tender, delicate and easily digested.

France and Great Britain face a serious shortage in milk. French food regulations forbid public eating houses to serve or consume butter except in the preparation of food. Consumption of cheese is prohibited, the probable explanation being that the milk is needed for direct consumption. Cream is forbidden entirely in public eating houses and the use of fresh or condensed milk is strictly limited. The entire milk supply is estimated at scarcely two-fifths normal.

At the close of the war there will be sudden surprises in the dairy interests all over the world, remarks the Milk Reporter. In the United States the dairy cattle and dairy products will occupy a much stronger position than they ever have before, and the dairy farmer who is going ahead with the improvement of his herd will be in a position to do business on a much better plane than heretofore, while the short-sighted farmer, who has taken the chance of obtaining an immediate profit in other lines, will find that he has gotten hold of the wrong end of it and that it will take years to build up what in a short time is torn down.

Milk is much cheaper than meat authorities point out. A quart gives the same amount of fuel as a whole pound of lean meat or as eight eggs. Still less expensive fuel is a bowl of corn meal mush and milk.

Now is the time of the year when dealers in dairy products have considerable surplus milk. By making butter milk from skim milk, profitable use may be made of this surplus and a wholesome food product made available. Many consumers are not familiar with the product or its value as a beverage and food.

During the month of April there were exported from the port of New York 3,517,462 pounds of butter, over 6,000,000 pounds of cheese, 206,036 pounds of oleomargarine, 53,000,617 pounds of oleo oil, 24,400,012 pounds of condensed milk and 1,426,836 pounds of salt.

Of the milk production in this country 40 per cent. is used as fluid milk, 40 per cent. for butter and 20 per cent. for condensed milk, cheese and ice cream. The increase in milk cows in the United States during the last year was small.

Cheese has become more of an article of diet since the war than ever before. Before it was a sort of a delicacy with our people. Conditions have made it necessary to limit the amount of meat and the Government has spent a great deal of effort inducing people to regard cheese seriously as a substitute for meat.

Under Opinion A-74 it was ruled that if before eggs are placed in a cold storage warehouse a definite lot is sold and if the title to this lot actually passes to the purchaser and thereafter the eggs are put in the warehouse, the purchaser is the original storer, even if the eggs are carried and insured in the seller's name. Supplementing this ruling it is now ruled that in similar cases the dealer who purchases before storage begins will not be prevented from becoming the original storer by the fact that the seller retains legal title, provided title is retained merely as a security for the payment.

There are many sides to the dairy question. Usually we think of the side that refers to the dollars and cents we expect to get out of the business now, forgetting that there is a far more important side. The dairyman who is keeping a large number of cows enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that he is not skinning his farm. Every year he is putting back a good deal of the fertility he takes out of his land in the form of manure, grass and soiling crop. This is not the case with the man who raises grain exclusively. He keeps little if any stock and sells his farm bare year after year until it produces little or nothing. He is a miner—not a farmer.—Blue Valley Bulletin.

FRAUDULENT EGG SUBSTITUTES.

Readers of the Bulletin will doubtless be interested in the articles appearing elsewhere concerning the so-called egg substitutes with which the markets have been flooded since the advance in the price of eggs. These articles are copied from the New York Globe and are the product of the nimble wit and the trenchant pen of Food Editor McCann, of that enterprising newspaper. Read them carefully; they will both instruct and amuse you. Then hand the Bulletin to your next door neighbor and call attention to the articles.

Food Editor McCann describes each of these products in a happy manner, showing in a clever, humorous and tactful way what rank humbugs and fakes they are. The Bulletin is convinced that his apposite analysis of these fraudulent products will prove interesting reading to the people of Pennsylvania. Mr. McCann shows that the enterprising individuals who hit upon this happy way of winning fortune have produced an article that possesses no food value whatever and that is paying them a hundredfold and more over their original investment. He has done the housekeepers of the land a substantial service by his expositions.

Since Special Bulletin No. 314, of the Dairy and Food Bureau, dealing with the egg substitute fraud, was issued, the Dairy and Food Commissioner has received a number of letters from manufacturers of the same, asking for permission to change the name of their goods. In every instance the desire to eliminate the word "egg" was expressed. The Commissioner very promptly replied that it was not the policy of the Bureau to play a shell game with the Act of Assembly by advising manufacturers of alleged food substitutes how to evade its provisions or elude or nullify its purposes. They were further advised that it is immaterial what name they give such products. If the claims and statements on a package are not strictly true the thing continues a fraud; a change of name would not alter conditions. In this case, whatever the name, the purpose would still be to deceive and befool the public and another name would not make it any the less a swindle and therefore its sale would be unlawful.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust wishes it to be distinctly understood that when such products are found on sale in Pennsylvania, under whatever names they appear, if they claim to be substitutes for eggs, or to take the place of eggs in baking or cooking, the makers or venders will be prosecuted as their sale is prohibited by the law of this Commonwealth. These egg frauds must go. Venders will be prosecuted in every county in the State, if need be, until the substitutes are driven out. They are the rankest frauds ever put on the market, and, as has been suggested already, are sold for ten times their actual value. It is true these substitutes are not specially harmful, but they possess no food value and their purchase is simply to throw money away. The Dairy and Food Bureau is doing everything in its power to give the facts concerning these fraudulent egg substitutes the fullest publicity in order that merchants may be fully advised concerning the risks they run by their sale; also that the housekeepers of the State may be prevented from throwing away good money for that which is not food. It has a right to expect the cordial support of all good citizens.

A DECISION OF VITAL IMPORTANCE.

Elsewhere will be found the opinion in full of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania in the case of the Commonwealth vs. J. R. Fulton, charged with selling an article known as "Mrs. Price's Canning Compound," in violation of the act of May 13, 1909. As will be perceived by the opinion, this case came up from Bedford county on an appeal by the plaintiff from the order of the lower court. The jury convicted the defendant but the court issued an order in arrest of judgment. It was from this order that the appeal was taken.

We have said that this is a decision of vital importance. And so it is, as the reader will perceive. It prohibits the sale in Pennsylvania of all canning compounds which are composed of boric acid, in whole or in part. So far as Pennsylvania is concerned the canning compound get-rich-scheme is doomed by this righteous and timely interpretation of the Act of Assembly. Boric acid costs in bulk five cents a pound. It retails in drug stores for from ten to fifteen cents per half pound. "Mrs. Price's Canning Compound" is composed of 95 per cent. boric acid and 5 per cent. common salt. Put up in a little package, with an attractive label, it is sold to the unsuspecting purchaser at the rate of ten cents per ounce. Boric acid and common salt are two of the country's cheapest products. If the housekeeper wanted to use the former as a preservative she could go to any drug store and purchase it direct for not more than fifteen cents a half pound.

Why is not this matter for the consideration of the general government? If the manufacturers of this canning compound pay 5 cents per pound for boric acid and retail it for 10 cents an ounce, what per cent. profit do they make? Is not this profiteering? Several similar canning compounds have been put on the market. They are composed of about the same ingredients, that is to say, of boric acid and a little common salt. Pennsylvania's food law specifically prohibits the use of boric acid as a preservative. The second section of the act of May 13, 1909, defines the term "food" in these terms: "Every article used for or entering into the composition of or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of food for man." Notwithstanding this plain language, the court below ruled in this particular case that the canning compound was not a food within the meaning of this definition. But Judge Henderson, of the Superior Court, speaking the unanimous sentiment of seven judges, differed from that decision and directed that sentence be imposed upon the defendant, because the canning compound is a food within the meaning of the act.

The lower court further ruled that 95 per cent. of boric acid could not be added to 5 per cent. of common salt, that the lesser must be added to the larger. On this point the Superior Court also unanimously disagreed with the court below. So, as we have already said, the judgment was reversed and the record remitted to the court below with directions to impose sentence according to law. It may be interesting to note in this connection the fact that the late Justice Mestrezat, in handing down the opinion of the Supreme Court in the Keven case, where salicylic acid had been used as an ingredient in raspberry syrup, said, among other things, in sustaining the act: "This is a wholesome piece of legislation and should receive a liberal construction by the courts, one that will fully and effectively accomplish the purpose of the enactment."

The principle of the law having been fully and plainly sustained by the higher courts, it is now proper to announce that Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust is making every preparation to inaugurate a crusade which will mean many prosecutions and plenty of convictions unless the fake canning compounds and egg substitutes are taken off the Pennsylvania market.

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED DURING JULY.

Fifty-one prosecutions were ordered brought in various counties of the State during the month of July against dealers for infractions of the laws regulating the sale of food.

Nineteen of the prosecutions were brought in Allegheny, Philadelphia and Venango counties for violations of the pure food regulations, as follows:

Sale of pork chop, unfit for food purposes, 1; sale of duck unfit for food purposes, 1; sale of peanut butter, unfit for food purposes, 1; sale of raspberry extract, misbranded, 1; sale of whitefish, sold for kippered herring, 1; sale of olive oil, consisting of cottonseed oil, 2; sale of butter, containing an excessive amount of moisture, 12.

For violations of the non-alcoholic drinks act eleven prosecutions were brought in Cambria and Somerset counties against dealers for the offenses recited: Sale of cherry cider, artificially colored and flavored, containing no cherry, 1; sale of cider, containing 3.74 per cent. alcohol, 1; cider containing 5.92 per cent. alcohol, 1; cherry cider, containing 4.72 per cent. alcohol, 1; cherry cider, containing 4.56 per cent. alcohol, 1; cherry cider, containing 7.55 per cent. alcohol, 1; cherry cider, containing 8.43 per cent. alcohol and colored with a coal tar dye, 1; apple cider, containing 3.23 per cent. alcohol, and colored with a coal tar dye, 1; grape cider, containing 3.13 per cent. alcohol and colored with a coal tar dye, 1; cider, containing 7.74 per cent. alcohol and colored with a coal tar dye, 1.

In Allegheny, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lawrence and Mercer counties, nine prosecutions were brought for violations of the milk act. The offenders were prosecuted for the following named offenses: Sale of milk, low in solids, watered, 2; sale of milk low in fat and solids, watered, 1; sale of milk low in fat and solids, partially skimmed, 1; low in fat and solids, skimmed and watered, 1; low in fat and solids, 4.

Six dealers who sold vinegar not up to the pure food requirements, were prosecuted for these violations of the regulations: Sale of cider vinegar, a distilled vinegar, colored and sold for cider vinegar, 1; distilled vinegar, colored, 1; distilled vinegar, colored and low in acidity, 1; sugar vinegar, misbranded and colored, 1; white distilled vinegar, low in acidity, 1; white wine vinegar, misbranded, a distilled vinegar, 1. These prosecutions were brought in Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lawrence, Luzerne and Venango counties.

Six Luzerne county dealers were prosecuted for violations of the ice cream regulations, one for selling chocolate ice cream, low in butterfat and five for selling vanilla ice cream, low in butterfat. The prosecutions were 27 less than were brought in June.

CO-OPERATION AND SELF-SACRIFICE ESSENTIAL.

The twenty-second annual convention of American Dairy, Food and Drug officials of the United States, held recently at the Annex Hotel, Chicago, was one of the most interesting and helpful meetings ever held by that organization. Eminent gentlemen were present representing the Food Administration of the Federal Government. British and French representatives were likewise in attendance and delivered addresses of a very practical nature. The sessions were well attended and it is believed the papers read, the addresses delivered, the discussions that followed, will all bear practical fruit. Following is the address delivered by James Foust, president of the association, at the opening session:

Members of the Association: This twenty-second annual convention of the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials is held at a moment when the eyes of men everywhere are turned toward the struggle now on in Europe. We behold a world in arms. The forces of right are facing the armies of evil. All that America stands for is at stake. The freedom for which the pioneers died is now defended by our sons. I do not think the result is doubtful. Still, all might be lost if it were not for the vast resources of America, the skill of her artisans, the wisdom of her public servants and the valor of her young men.

As food officials we have long realized that without large shipments of foodstuffs to Europe our Allies would fail. Always dependent upon the outside world for much of their food, neither England nor France could long stand out against the forces of the kaiser if it were not for the generous stores shipped to them by our country. It is a great pleasure to be told by Food Controller Herbert Hoover that the sacrifices of the American home, added to the efforts of the American farmer, have removed fear from the minds of our Allies. For this year, at least, the danger has passed.

While the war lasts and the need exists Americans must continue to practice self-sacrifice. It is our duty to conserve foods and safeguard their wholesomeness, and in this field our responsibilities are large. It is the patriotic duty of the American farmer to produce the greatest possible quantity of food. It is the duty of the American household to eat less of the foods most urgently needed in Europe and which may be most safely exported. Americans have already made large changes in their daily diet in order to help their friends "Over There." This, I am sure, they will continue to do and that without any decrease in their health, their strength or their fighting spirit.

The least we can do is to keep ourselves informed, to remain in touch with all sides of this important matter and to keep the people informed concerning their duties and the best way to perform them. In all things we are expected to be helpers to Food Controller Hoover and his subordinates in our respective states. What our constituents have a right to expect from us is enlightened fidelity, joined to genuine patriotism.

Our program has been planned with the purpose of getting us in touch with the latest developments of the food problem and to organize such activities as are likely to aid in its wise and beneficial solution. We have with us authorities of international fame who will acquaint us with the needs of our Allies. Leaders of the National Food Administration are also here to inform us concerning its desires and purposes. Experienced men of our own group have been asked to increase our knowledge.

I shall not trespass upon the subjects assigned to the several speakers. But I do earnestly ask your careful attention, your deep interest and your full co-operation in the work of the convention. Every subject on the program is of vital interest. Let every official be present every moment. There will be plenty of time, after the general sessions, for committee work and private conferences. Let each feel that the work is his own. Let us be united upon the main things, and avoid waste of time and strength upon differences about little matters.

Allow me in closing to emphasize two or three things. Let us use all our official powers and personal influence, and make every adjustment or regulation that can be made to save for human use every available ounce of wholesome food. While we aid in readjustment, let us continue to insist upon honesty. Let food be sold for exactly what it is. To encourage one part of the people to fool the rest of the people is not the way to prepare them for sticking together in the last and hardest hour of the fight.

Let us rally to Mr. Hoover's support in every way we can. He has a hard, hard job. We can help him. Let us fight by his side.

A FAR-REACHING DECISION.

Pennsylvania State Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust has declared that the opinion rendered by the Superior Court would have a far reaching effect in the enforcement of the food law, and that it will drive canning compounds out of Pennsylvania. He also said that any merchants having canning compounds had better get them off their shelves, and that manufacturers and wholesale dealers must withdraw all such products from Pennsylvania to protect themselves against prosecution.

The Superior Court in its opinion reverses Judge Bailey in a Bedford county case against J. R. Fulton for violation of the pure food law in selling "Mrs. Price's Canning Compound" and describes the compound as being boric acid, nothing more or nothing less.

Two important questions were involved. The court below took the stand that the canning compound was not a food within the meaning of the law, that it was composed of 95 per cent. boric acid and 5 per cent. salt and that 95 per cent. boric acid could not be added to the 5 per cent. salt. On both points the Superior Court disagreed with the court below. The decision of the lower court was reversed and the record remitted to impose sentence according to law.

The food law specifically prohibits the use of boric acid to preserve food. The fraud in this case was that boric acid was used in the canning compound and sold under a coined name. Under the definition of food the act reads: "That the term 'Food,' as used in this act, shall include not only every article used for food by man, but also every article used for, or entering into the composition of, or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of, food for man."

CANNING COMPOUNDS UNDER THE BAN.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA,
SITTING IN PHILADELPHIA.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, vs.
J. R. Fulton.

No. 13 October Term, 1918.

Appeal by plaintiff from the order of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Bedford County.

Filed July 10, 1918.
Henderson, J.

The defendant was indicted for a violation of the Act of May 13, 1909, P. L. 520, in selling an article of food and an article used for, and entering into the composition of, and intended for use as, an ingredient in the preparation of food, described as "Mrs. Price's Canning Compound," which was adulterated in that it contained a proportion of boric acid. A verdict of guilty was returned by the jury and afterward judgment was arrested by the court and from that order the Commonwealth appeals. The title of the act is in part: "An act relating to food, defining food, providing for the protection of the public health, and the prevention of fraud and deception, by prohibiting the manufacture or sale, the offering for sale or the having in possession with intent to sell, of adulterated, misbranded, or deleterious foods." The second section contains a definition of the word "food" as follows: "The term 'food' as used in this act shall include not only every article used as food by man but also every article used for or entering into the composition of or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of food for man." Prohibition against the use of boric acid is contained in section 3 which provides "that for the purpose of this act an article of food shall be deemed to be adulterated * * * 5th. If it contains any added boric acid or borates," etc. The learned judge of the court below based the decision on a determination that the compound was not food and that it did not contain added boric acid within the meaning of the act. It was shown by the Commonwealth that the compound was composed of boric acid and salt; 94.73% of the former and 5.07% of the latter. The compound was sold in packages which included among other statements the following:

"Mrs. Price's Canning Compound.

"Manufactured by
"The Price Compound Company,
"Minneapolis, Minn.

"May be used in canning all kinds of fruit, and is specially valuable for Corn, Beans, Peas, Asparagus, Tomatoes, Etc.

"May also be used in making Catsup, Sweet Pickles or anything that is liable to ferment. It saves money, time, labor, worry, and insures the best results. See our recipe book for instructions on canning and pickling."

The contention of the Commonwealth is that the article sold was food and that it was also used and intended to be used as an ingredient in the preparation of food for man, and was, therefore, within the prohibition of the statute. It is conceded that the salt constituent of the compound was an article of food but the learned judge of the court below was of the opinion that in view of the small proportion of the food product and the large proportion of boric acid in the compound it ought to be assumed that the law was not intended to apply to a preparation composed almost wholly of an article which is not food; that it could not consistently be held that 95% could be added to 5%; that the use of the word "added" in the statute "in common parlance" signifies "to unite the lesser in essence with the greater; the smaller in volume, magnitude or importance with the larger." Pursuing this line of argument with illustrations the court reached the conclusion that the legislature never had in mind such an article of commerce as is under consideration in this case as an adulterated food. This construction, however, overlooks an important part of the statute which covers every article "entering into the composition of or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of food for man." In either case, therefore, whether the article sold may be classed as food or is merely a compound intended to be used in the composition of or as an ingredient in the preparation of food if it contain a constituent the use of which is prohibited in food it is within the purview of the statute. We are unable to agree with the learned court that the question must be disposed of on the basis of the proportions of the compound entering into the composition of food. Under such construction the purpose of the law might easily be defeated. A much smaller quantity of the prohibited article than that used in the canning compound might be used without violating the statute. If the proportion of 95% may be allowed, by like reasoning 80% or 70% would be permitted, for the larger could not be said to be added to the smaller quantity. The smaller quantity could not "contain" the larger. But it was not the intention of the Legislature to determine the proportion in which food might be adulterated except in the limited use of sulphur dioxide and sodium benzoate as applied in certain articles. The United States statute contains similar language to that used in the act of 1909 and in United States vs. Coca Cola Company, 241 U. S. 265, the court considered the meaning of the word "added" and said: "Nor can we accept the view that the word 'added' should be taken as referring to the quantity of the ingredient used. It is added ingredient which the statute describes; not added quantity of ingredient." This construction is required in the light of the purpose of the legislation which was not only to prevent fraud but to provide for the protection of the public health. What is necessary to promote this object is a legislative question within constitutional limits and the court is controlled by the legislative declaration on the subject. The combination of boric acid with common salt amounts to an adulteration within the meaning of the statute. The term "adulteration" is used in a particular sense. It is the combining of a forbidden substance with an article of food to be sold to the public. But the case of the Commonwealth stands on a broader base than this. The act defines "food" to be not only every article used as food for man but also every article entering into the composition of or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of food for man. It is not contended that the canning compound was not to enter into the composition of food or not intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of it. The contrary expressly appears. It was not only to be used in the preparation of food but was to become a constituent part thereof. It can not be contended that when a quantity of it was added to the can or jar in the preparation of food it did not become a part of the contents of the can or jar and of course it entered into the food preparation. The letter of the statute prohibits this. If it was within the power of the legislature, therefore, to define what should be considered food the defendant offended against the law. It is not to be questioned that the legislature in passing the act may declare its leaning and construction and such declaration is binding on the courts: Com. v. Curry, 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 356; Com. v. Kebort, 212 Pa. 289. The definition of Section 2 of the act is sufficiently comprehensive to cover the case of a sale of this compound intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of food. It is contended, however, on the part of the appellee that the title of the statute is not sufficiently clear to meet the constitutional requirement. We are unable to agree with this contention. The title relates to food; to the protection of the public health prohibiting the sale or offering for sale or having in possession with intent to sell adulterated or deleterious foods. This title we regard as sufficiently comprehensive to impose the duty of inquiry as to the contents of the statute and persons dealing in food or in an article to be used in the preparation and composition of food are put on notice of all the statute contains. We are not required to apply critical or strained construction to legislation of this character nor are we at liberty to set aside the legislative will except from imperious necessity imposed by the Constitution. We find no such necessity in this case.

The judgment is reversed and the record remitted to the court below with direction to impose sentence according to law.

COMMONWEALTH versus FULTON.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA,
PHILADELPHIA COUNTY.

I, William A. Stone, Prothonotary of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of the opinion in the above entitled cause, so full and entire as appears of Record in said Court.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said Court of Philadelphia, this 11th day of July, A. D. 1918.

WILLIAM A. STONE,
Prothonotary.

LOUISIANA REGULATES THE SALE OF EGGS.

The State Board of Health of Louisiana has adopted certain specific regulations concerning the handling or the sale of eggs, as will be observed by the following regulations just made and issued for the benefit of all concerned:

Persons engaged in the production, handling or selling of eggs are hereby notified of the following regulations:

1. The first buyer of eggs (the huckster, the local retail merchant, or others), must candle carefully every lot of eggs that he buys. A Candling Certificate, properly filled out, must accompany each case or carton of eggs.
2. He shall discard all eggs known as "yolks stuck to the shell," "heavy blood rings," "partially hatched," "moldy eggs," "black spots," "black rots," and any other eggs of an unwholesome nature.
3. He shall pay only for good, edible eggs.
4. He shall return to the producers, if possible, the "rejects" for the producers' own examination.
5. The good eggs shall be kept in a cool, dry place until sold or shipped.
6. When shipped, eggs shall be forwarded by train, auto service, or otherwise, as soon as possible, weather conditions being considered.
7. Eggs known as "large hatch spots," "heavily shrunken eggs," "settled yolks," and "leaking eggs," are fit for consumption, but will not stand transportation. They should be used by the home community.
8. All "checks" and "cracks" shell eggs should be shipped in cases stenciled that they contain crack or check shell eggs.
9. All subsequent receivers of eggs shall use care and intelligence in the handling of these eggs, and when the date on the egg candling certificate shows that 48 hours have elapsed since the eggs were candled, they shall be recandled during the warm summer months. When the weather is cool or the time elapsing within seven days, they may be forwarded on without recandling, always keeping in mind that it is a waste of eggs, fillers, flats and valuable transportation space to ship "rejects" or other eggs of doubtful character.
10. All persons or firms dealing in eggs will be required to register with the Bureau of Foods and Drugs, Louisiana State Board of Health, before July 15, 1918.

The above regulations are made in an effort to stop traffic in bad eggs. They should be posted in a conspicuous place. Your hearty co-operation is requested in carrying out these rules. Warm weather is here and EGGS MUST BE PROTECTED AND SAVED.

OSCAR DOWLING,
President and Ex-officio Food Commissioner.
CASSIUS L. CLAY, State Analyst.

Why Do Eggs Spoil?

1. One cause is excessive heat. (Most important.)
   Reason—Warmth starts germination of fertile egg.
   Result—"Blood rings," "black rots," and "eggs with embryo." All inedible eggs.
   Remedy—Keep rooster away from the hens, producing infertile eggs. Store eggs in cold, dry place at about 50° F.
2. Another cause is moisture.
   Reason—Water dissolves natural bacterial proof coating of egg.
   Result—"Stuck yolk," "moldy egg," and "musty egg." All inedible eggs.
   Remedy—Store eggs in a cold, dry place at about 50° F. Do not allow eggs to come in contact with water.
3. Another cause is cracking.
   Reason—Breaking of shell allows entrance of bacteria.
   Result—Rapid decomposition due to bacterial and mold growths.
   Remedy—Use great care in packing, shipping and marketing eggs.

Important Facts Concerning Eggs.

At present about 10% of all eggs produced become rotten.

About 20% deteriorate materially in hot season from lack of proper care.

About 25% become rotten during hot summer months.

About 40% materially depreciate in food value due to improper handling.

The annual loss of eggs amounts to $50,000,000.

Rooster with flock accounts for more than half of the rotten eggs.

Kill the rooster and save eggs and profits.

Make the hens lay eggs in established nests.

Keep the nests clean and fresh. Clean, fresh eggs are worth more.

Eggs are just as perishable as fresh meat.

Bulletin No. 565—How to Candle Eggs.

Bulletin No. 664—The Prevention of Breakage of Eggs in Transit When Shipped in Car Lots.

Candle all eggs. Reject all bad eggs. Pay only for good eggs.

LOUISIANA STATE BOARD OF HEALTH,
Bureau of Foods and Drugs.

FOOD ADMINISTRATOR HOOVER SPEAKS.

Following is the speech by Mr. Herbert Hoover, U. S. Food Administrator, at a meeting of hotel men, New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

Ladies and Gentlemen: We have asked you to come, many of you on a long journey, with great sacrifice to yourselves. We have not asked you to come for any idle purpose. Unfortunately, you meet us at probably the most serious day in our national history since the Battle of Gettysburg. The seriousness of the situation can only emphasize the problem which we wish to put before you.

The Food Administration has not taken the attitude of the general in command giving orders. Our attitude to the American public has been consistent, that we should ask for service, that we should ask for self-sacrifice, that we should tell in a clear and direct way the why and wherefore of every request. It is due to you to say that I should tell you first the why and wherefore of your coming, because of the request that I am going to make of you.

Our wheat situation is today the most serious situation in the food supply of the whole Allied world. We have had a stock taking in the early days of March, and we find that our harvest was less than it was estimated. There is also another and more bitter difficulty in the delays of shipping, in the growing scarcity of ships, that has thrown a larger burden upon the American people in feeding the Allies than we had anticipated. We had all expected that the Argentine supply would be available in Europe before this time. Those supplies will not arrive for another two months in quantity, and even then will be less than we had expected. The consequence is that the supply of breadstuffs in Europe is at its lowest ebb. There is but one source of supply, and that is the United States.

Today our investigation shows that if we are to ship to the Allies the amount that is necessary to carry over, even the minimum of the bread supply, to their people, we must cut our own consumption by one-half. The limit that we propose on Allied shipment is simply the limit of our exporting power. It may eventuate that we must reduce the bread consumption of the United States more than one-half. We intend to ship the bread supply from here, willy nilly, but it is not a simple problem of taking bread-stuffs from the people.

Every shipment of grain,—every shipment of wheat,—that we can send from our ports, is a shipment saved from the Argentine. Every ship can do double the duty from our ports that it can do from the Argentine. Every time that we send a shipment, we save two ships from the Argentine. Every time we save a ship we save building a ship. Every time we save a ship we save the transport and the supply of one regiment of American soldiers. The Allies, within the last few days, have asked us to send reinforcements, larger and faster than we had anticipated. I assure you that if we are to give them that we must draw these ships from the Argentine and put them into American ports.

We are asked why we do not ship corn, why we wish to ship wheat. No corn can be shipped across the Atlantic for two months after the first of April, because that is the germinating season for corn and it will not stand shipment.

Wheat is a durable grain. From the point of view of inter-allied feeding, wheat is absolutely vital. It is the one grain that we have that will stand shipment. It is the one grain that will serve. Up to this time the Allies have used some thirty to forty per cent. of corn in their bread. Their bread has been as nothing compared to the bread that we have had in this country, neither in palatability nor luxuriousness. After this, if they are to be fed, they must be fed on wheat bread, or none at all.

Now, in this period of extreme difficulty in Europe, the time when the morale of the civil populations of our Allies is at its lowest ebb, it does not stand for us to say, "You can wait two months and then you can eat corn." It is for us to say, "You shall receive every solitary grain of wheat that our ports can handle."

Our population has lived before this on corn. For three years the Southern States lived and put up a good fight with no wheat. For periods of four and five years at a stretch no wheat was known to the people of New England. There is no reason why we should insist on having the most luxurious grain at this time, when it is our only transportable grain.

Now, we have founded the Food Administration on voluntary effort. We have no desire to depart from this idea, but if we are to accomplish this problem it must be accomplished by the voluntary effort of the intelligent people, the influential people of the community. If this democracy has not reached such a stage of development that it has in its people the self-denial, voluntary self-denial, willingness to sacrifice, to protect its own institutions and those of Europe from which our own were bred, then it deserves to go down under the German hand and take another form of civilization.

I therefore, cannot give you orders. I am going to make an appeal. That appeal is this, that you should abolish the use of wheat and wheat products in every first-class hotel and restaurant until the next harvest.

(Mr. Hoover was here interrupted by applause, his auditors rising for a prolonged demonstration.)

I had felt that I should receive that response from you.

We must always bear in mind that our population is a population of great variety of life. A large number of our people are dependent on the baker. Those who are dependent upon the baker can only eat bread the sub-stratum of which is wheat. You know as well as I that the baker cannot bake cereal products without a predominant portion of wheat. That section of our population, our working population, must receive wheat bread to some degree, but that other section of our population, to which you gentlemen belong, and to which your clientele belongs, and to whom I belong, can quite well and without any self-denial worth the mention, make that small sacrifice. Therefore, if we are to get the distribution of such wheat supplies as we must have for some sections of our population, it can only be if you and I and our kind are prepared to do without.

Now, in these times of social unrest there is one antidote. That antidote was never applied in Russia, and the result has been massacre. That antidote is a willingness for us to sacrifice more than we ask of those who have less to give. We must ask sacrifice from those who give from plenty, not from those who would have to give from their necessities.

Therefore, my message is small and concrete—the service that we ask of you, that we ask of every well-to-do, every independent person in the United States today is, that he shall abstain from the use of wheat in any form until the next harvest. Every message that we receive every hour of the day from this country—and it is a great country—shows us that we shall have a larger acreage planted in wheat this year than ever before. The arrival of the next harvest will solve our difficulties. If the Lord is good to us in the weather, our problem will be over by the first of September. That is not a long period of sacrifice.

Now, most of us can play but a small part in the winning of this war, and you and I do not wish to look into the eyes of our children ten years hence and say that we failed in our duty. This is a sacrifice that is small in figure, but I can assure you there is no message that I can send the Food Controllers of Europe today that will carry such weight and such encouragement to their people as to be able to say that every first-class hotel in the United States, has, for their sake, abolished the use of wheat.

EVERYTHING TO WIN THE WAR.

Following is the speech by Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, of the U. S. Food Administration, at a meeting of Hotel Men, New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

I wish very briefly to lay stress upon three points that every man in this room ought to realize and accept as war policies.

We have got to reach the place, each one of us, where we define every decision in our lives as an act of war policy. Everything that we do, plan, eat, wear, must be analyzed and measured from one single point of view—will it contribute to the carrying on of the war, or will it contribute to its prolongation. There is no other thing in the world for us but to define everything in our lives as acts of military necessity or policy.

The first necessity for us is to get a clear conception of the relation of wheat in the human diet and to divert ourselves of all pre-conceptions that a life of generations of ease, indolence and luxury has bred in us.

We are accustomed to regard wheat as a more or less indispensable article of diet. It isn't. It is an article of luxury, and absolutely nothing else. Wheat possesses over oats, corn and rice absolutely no nutritional quality for man or beast. It has no more protein, and no better protein. It has no more fat and no different fat. It has no mineral salt better or in larger amounts. It has no more fuel or better fuel. It is just one of the cereals, and there isn't the slightest evidence that it is the best one, because so far as comparative tests are concerned in animals, it isn't the best one, it is very far from the best one.

Our predilection for wheat is solely a question of taste, comfort and convenience; it is absolutely nothing else. Wheat makes the nicest bread, the lightest bread, the bread that is transported best, the bread that keeps moist and sweet longest. It lends itself to the habits of ease and convenience of a people; and because it lends itself to the convenience of a people, we want it sent to Europe and not kept here, and we ask and expect the American man and woman in judging of every situation as contrasted with that of our Allies, men and women, to ask who has the larger burden to bear, who has borne it the longest, who has wasted in resources the most, who has lost the most by sacrifice, who has suffered the most in death and destruction, we or our Allies? And when we have a choice to decide as to whether we or they should increase or decrease our burden, it ought to be not the duty, but the joyful privilege, of every American to lessen the burden of every man, woman and child in the Allied countries of Europe, by accepting the heavier burden on this side. And because wheat is easier to prepare than oats and rice and barley—that is the very best reason in the world why we ought to accept the oats and the rice and the barley and to give them the wheat that is necessary to maintain a normal ration.

You gentlemen serve a great many food faddists and cranks, and you will hear a great many expressions that your patrons cannot eat this or that, merely because they are accustomed to this or that other thing, or because they have had idiosyncrasies bred in them or developed by luxury.

Now, gentlemen, whenever any one of your patrons tells you that he or she can't eat oats, or rice, or corn, but must have wheat, that individual is either a crank or a slacker, and deserves from your hand only the consideration proper to the one or the other.

We have all to decide whether we will serve the Allies, who need help the most, or whether we will serve ourselves, who need it less. We had better begin serving the Allies now.

The second point that I wish to emphasize, and this is based upon European experience in the art of rationing, is the enormous positive example, the worth of the example, of the highest grade hotels and restaurants. Gentlemen, there is no such thing as enforcing a food conservation program in public eating houses unless the very best hotels and restaurants lend the positive example in every way and in the most punctilious fashion. The greatest diet difficulties in Germany today are due to the fact that the poor man realizes that the big hotels don't play the game. A rich man today in Germany can buy anything he has the price to pay for—hams at $60 to $70 apiece, butter at $5 a pound. Any delicacy outside of the regulations can be bought by a man of wealth in Germany today, and this has honeycombed that nation with graft. And it started with the very best hotels, the Adlon, the Esplanade, and they are to-day responsible for the disorganization of the rationing systems in public eating places. Each manager or owner of the high-grade hotel and eating house has a positive influence and example that cannot be measured, as judged by European experience. Each one of you has the chance to be a big brother to a Boy Scout, and how the Boy Scout acts will depend very largely upon not only your example but your positive working influence with the institutions and establishments that are smaller, simple, and in no way as influential as your own.

We have just sent over two of the best food experts of the United States to Europe, and what is the striking thing contained in their letters from London and Paris? The thing that struck them the most was the scarcity of food in the best hotels of those two cities.

Thirdly and lastly, you have a very important field of negative example. It isn't possible to maintain a conservation program in the home, if the husband can leave and go to a hotel and escape it. It is thus impossible for a home program to be successful, so long as hotels, restaurants, public eating houses and clubs will give the spoiled man those things to eat which the housewife is trying to keep him from having.

Now, this is not a theory, gentlemen; it is an absolute fact. We hear it from every State, we hear it from all classes, we hear it from women of large means and from women of little means, that they who are trying to play the game, who are conscientious, are frustrated in their efforts at conservation by the selfishness of men who will not play the game with them, because they know that they can find some public eating places in which the policy of conservation is violated. In this negative manner, by making it impossible for selfish men to break the rules which their wives are trying to follow, you can contribute enormously to the effectiveness of a food conservation program.

Go to England today and compare it with England of a year or two years ago, and what is the striking conviction that comes home? That the intensity with which England is fighting this war is due as much as anything else to the example, force and ability of her upper classes, so-called, the classes of means. They deny themselves the most, they take the heaviest burdens, they reduce the most from their accustomed standards; and the poorer classes, the working classes and the union labor groups of England have become convinced that the British classes of wealth and station are absolutely in this war to the end, are willing to risk everything and will stand every deprivation that they ask anybody else to stand, and more. And when this spirit comes over this country, we will all have a much greater intensity in the carrying on of the war than we at present possess.

I wish every man in this room could go to the battlefield of France, could go to the front, not merely to see what a front looks like, with its trenches, its men and all of the paraphernalia, but to get the reaction of the French common soldier toward the American visitor. These men who have faced death for three and a half years for you and me, fighting a battle in which we have just as much at stake as they have—these men salute an American civilian with an expression of respect, reverence and trust that is absolutely past description by human words.

Why do these French soldiers who have struggled with death for freedom for three and a half years salute the American? Because in that salute they express their trust in America in the war; they express the trust in our assuming our share of this struggle from every point of view, not merely by governmental participation in a military program, but also by the reconstruction of our entire lives from the point of view of saving and sacrifice, by supporting them in the same sense that the American boy who fights beside them, supports them, and is supported by them.

Now, we, gentlemen, must be worthy of this trust, and when a French soldier salutes an American civilian and he knows that that American is merely one typical of a hundred and five millions, he expects us to do our duty as an ally, and he knows we will do it. The people of France know that the American people are being asked to undergo food conservation, and they know that the man who asked them to undergo it is the man best qualified in the world to lay out a program—the Hoover of Northern France and Belgium and now the Hoover of the United States.

EGG SAVERS NOW LOOTING NEW YORK, HAVE BEEN DRIVEN FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

Money-Mulcting Fakes Composed of White Starch Dyed Yellow with Coal-Tar Rob Thrifty Housewife with Aid of Substitute Jimmy—"Purity, Wholesomeness, and Economy" the Sanctimonious Pose of Worthless Buccaneer.

From the Globe and Commercial Advertiser, New York.

BY ALFRED W. McCANN.

The most contemptible form of food fraud which the heroic sacrifices of a world suffering desolation, disease, and death have inspired a few sick souls to enter into is the egg substitute, at least forty varieties of which are now on sale all over the city of New York.

Our food authorities, as usual, have winked at the egg substitute abuse, taking no action against it, although in the state of Pennsylvania, thanks to the self-respecting character of James Foust, Dairy and Food Commissioner, and the honesty of Charles H. LaWall, chemist of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the miserable egg fraud has been court-martialled and banished from the state.

To quote LaWall: "There is no more reprehensive way of making money than to take a common everyday substance, disguise it, alter its appearance, make a lot of lying claims for it, and then sell it under a fancy label at fifteen times its market value, extolling it as a war saving economy."

These egg substitutes not only have no merit, but they are mere toll collectors, depending for their popularity upon deceit and camouflage.

CONDEMNED BY GLOBE.

Beginning back in the summer of 1917 a parade of them began to march into the Globe Office seeking admission to the Globe's Pure Food Directory. Every one of them was condemned and turned down on ground that although the alkali contained in them made them excellent for polishing nickel and silverware, they were not fit for food, and under no circumstances could receive the recognition of the Globe, even though their sale as egg substitutes in the city and state of New York was strictly legal, and apparently not displeasing to the authorities.

Of the forty-two "egg savers" analyzed by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture all but six contain coal tar, and every one of them contains starch.

Two of them contain four kinds of starch—potato starch, tapioca starch, rice starch, and corn starch.

Two of them contain tapioca starch exclusively.

Three of them contain corn starch and rice starch exclusively, and all the others consist of from 50 to 75 per cent. of corn starch.

Three of them contain over 10 per cent. of washing powder.

Twenty of them contain more than 8 per cent. of the same substance.

The balance, with four exceptions ranged from 7 per cent. down to 3 per cent. of inert mineral mud, and the remainder contain less than 1 per cent. of ash derived from unknown origin.

JUMP LIKE GRASSHOPPER.

Their composition ranges in fat like the waves of the sea, from mere ripples of two-tenths of 1 per cent. to mountain waves of 29 per cent.

The protein makes even more spectacular jumps, running all the way from seven-tenths of 1 per cent. to 36 per cent. although nowhere does the starch content fall below 50 per cent.

Many of them sell at the rate of two ounces for 25 cents, or $2 a pound. Others are more generous, selling for 10 cents an ounce, or $1.60 a pound. A few of them with reckless generosity sell four ounces for a quarter, or at a rate of $1 a pound.

Most of them claim that one-fourth teaspoonfull takes the place of two real, pure, fresh, wholesome eggs. They are all decorated with the picture of a big fat hen, a nest of eggs or some other suggestion of hen fruit, more or less illusive.

Here and there, in an outburst of conscientious scruples, as in the case of Ward & Co., Chicago, who manufacture the Magic Egg Saver, something like the plain truth is told.

"Magic Egg Saver," say Ward & Co., "Will serve the purpose of four dozen eggs, except in nutrition."

CRAMMED WITH POETRY.

Most people heretofore thought that eggs were used only for nutritive purposes, but Ward & Co., have found other uses than nutrition in the exploitation of their product.

They say on the label it contains "maize flour, egg albumen, powdered milk, rice flour, potato flour, sodium chloride sod, bicarb, amaranth, naphthol yellow, orange yellow. Not a substitute for eggs. 6.5 oz. 25 cents. Use a scant or level teaspoonful for each egg."

The Magic Egg Saver thus costs less than 75 cents a pound, and puts to shame all the other fellows who, to serve the world in times of stress are striving to inculcate habits of thrift among the plain people by teaching them to use dyed starch as a substitute for eggs, at a cost of $2 a pound.

Ward & Company quote a little poetry in boosting the Magic Egg Saver.

"Mary had a little hen,
That acted very queer:
She always laid when eggs were cheap,
But quit when they were dear."

There is another Magic Egg Saver on the Market, also made in Chicago by the Sherer Gillette Company, which declares that it is "a Substitute for eggs in baking and cooking. Use a teaspoonful for each egg called for."

FULL OF MAGIC.

This Magic Egg Saver gives only half the quantity of the other Magic Egg Saver, but unlike Ward's Magic Egg Saver, it contains no coal tar, and although it costs half as much as the Ward Magic Egg Saver, it contains 21 per cent. more fat, but about the same quantity of starch. Both of them contain nearly 10 per cent. of mineral matter.

A cake made of starchy flour derives its chief food value from the milk and eggs which it contains. Starchy flour doped with egg substitutes consisting chiefly of more starch and coal tar dye makes the finished cake appear as yellow as it really would appear if it contained eggs, but robs the starch cake of its only excuse for existence.

Alas, alas, the chastening effects of the war have not yet reached the egg substitute.

Here, then, is the bunch of them, the more wicked of which are respectfully referred to the Health Department for immediate attention.

AGG-O-La POWDER (Egg Substitute). "Pure and wholesome, conforming with all pure food laws. Artificially colored. Made by the Eulicid Food Products Co. Brooklyn, N. Y. 4 oz. 35 cents." Very bunk!

AIGO. Made by the EGG-O Company, Baltimore, Md. "Artificially colored. 1¾ oz. Used instead of 12 eggs. 15 cents. There is nothing like AIGO." But you can't throw it at a bad actor. Not eggy enough!

ALLENEGG. Made by Allenegg Manufacturing Company, Binghamton, N. Y. "1½ oz. 10 cents." (The label does not declare the presence of coal tar which is present.) Very much all in!

VERY KLUCKY!

Madam Blumer's EGG-SAVER. Made by Lincoln Chemical Works, Chicago, Ill. "Value 48 eggs, cost 25 cents. Equal to 48 eggs. Better than eggs. Will answer the purpose of 48 eggs except in nutrition." (Last three words in small type.) "Four ounces worth $1. One pinch represents one fresh hen's egg." Sounds like von Kluck making a report on his capture of Paris; very Klucky!

ECC-KON-O-My. Made by National White Cross League, Chicago. "Pure and wholesome. 4 oz. 25 cents. Use one teaspoonful for each egg called for." White Cross egg substitutes are not used by the U. S. Army hospitals nor by the Red Cross in its relief work. The White Cross has been hatched from a package of profit not from the heart of humanity.

ECC-O-Gene. Made by Wright Imp. & Exp. Co. N. Y. "3½ oz. 25 cents. Use package in place of 36 eggs. Keeps indefinitely." Very indefinitely

EGGATINE. Made by The Royal Palm Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. "A substitute for eggs. Costs one-third as much as eggs. Artificially colored." Very substituty!

EGGETTE (Egg Substitute). Made by Bestever Products Co., Chicago. "Pure healthful, nutritious. Always fresh. The original egg substitute. 1½ oz. equals 12 eggs. Artificially colored." Very original!

EGGINE. Made by Chas. T. Morrissy & Co., Chicago, Ill. "Unsurpassed for purity. Artificially colored." Very dyed!

STILL THEY COME ON.

EGG-KON-O-My. Made by National White Cross League, Chicago, Ill. who also manufacture ECC-KON-O-My. "3¾ oz. net weight, 25 cents" or ¼ oz. less than ECC-KON-O-My for same money. Both products consist chiefly of corn starch. Neither has been noticed by the Red Cross!

EGG-LESS. Made by the Thomas Manufacturing Company, Dayton, Ohio. "A wonderful preparation used instead of eggs. Saves about 45 eggs. Made from corn starch, skim milk powder, milk casein, powdered eggs, rice flour, bicarbonate of soda and certified color. 4½ oz. 35 cents." EGG-LESS consists of over half corn starch and rice starch. Very Eggless!

EGGNIT. Made by C. H. Stuart & Co., Newark, N. J. "A pure food product. Artificially colored. Weight 1½ oz. Price 10 cents. Use ¾ teaspoonful instead of one egg." Very nitty!

EGGNO. Made by the Newton Tea & Spice Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. "Far superior to the usual egg substitutes. Result of scientific research. 3½ oz. 25 cents. Use package in place of 3 dozen eggs." Very researchy!

EGG-NU. Made by the Abner Royce Company, Cleveland. "Substitute for eggs Pure and wholesome and good, containing the nutriment of eggs. Artificially colored. 3 oz. 25 cents. Equals 2 doz. eggs." Contains 50 per cent. corn starch and 10 per cent. mineral matter. Very faky!

LAY ON, MacDUFF!

EGG-O. Made by J. M. Pitkin & Co., Newark, N. Y." A wholesome mixture colored with certified colored 1½ oz. 10 cents. Takes the place of 12 eggs." Very wholesome.

EGG-O-Gene. Made by Wright & Co., N. Y. "Egg Substitute. Artificially colored with certified color. 25 cents' worth equals 36 eggs." A perfect thirty-six!

EGGOLA. Made by Wixon Spice Co., Chicago. "A substitute for eggs. Pure, wholesome, convenient and much cheaper than eggs." Veryola!

EGG-O-LIEU. Made by Webster Company, Sharon, Pa. "A scientific compound. Wholesome, Harmless coloring. ¼ teaspoonful equals two eggs." Very scientific!

EGGOLINE. Made by S. G. B. Medical Specialties Company, Reading, Pa. "Unsurpassed for purity and economy. 4 oz. 25 cents. Used in place of 3 dozen eggs." Very medical!

EGG-O-NO. Made by the Thomas Manufacturing Company." Dayton, Ohio. "Pure, wholesome. One teaspoonful equals an egg." Coal tar color included.

EGG-O-THRIFT. Made by L. F. Elliot Company, Philadelphia, Pa. "A substitute for eggs. Artificially colored. 4 oz. net. 30 cents." Very thrifty.

EGG-SUB. Made by Imperial Tea Company, Harrisburg, Pa. "Use in place of eggs for cakes, ice cream, etc. Artificially colored. 4 oz. 25 cents." Very subby!

EGG-VITO. Made by Wendell-Clements Company, Chicago, Ill. "Delicious and Nutritious. Takes the place of eggs in every way. Artificially colored. 35 cents worth equals three dozen eggs." Very three-dozeny!

More will follow to-morrow if you can stand it.

NEW LANGUAGE HATCHED FOR NON-SKID EGGLESS SAVERS.

Unscrambleable Fruit of Henless Pedigree, "Non-Omelet-O," "Soak-Em-Hard-O," and "Pop-U-Lo-Be-Dam-O" to Be Added to Bunch Chased Out of Pennsylvania—New York Authorities Still Sleeping.

By Alfred W. McCann.

From the Globe and Commercial Advertiser, New York.

The pro-Prussian egg fraud so bitterly condemned by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture while shiftless food authorities of other states sit in their swivel chairs and wink receives less consideration at the hands of James Foust, dairy and food commissioner, than the average allied soldier receives in one of the kaiser's prison camps.

"It is little wonder," declares the State of Pennsylvania in Bulletin No. 314, "that the consuming public, ignorant of the real facts in connection with the egg substitute frauds, is led astray by the lying labels and extravagant claims and duped into purchasing stuff sold under the pretext of furthering economy when in reality it adds to the high cost of living by returning little or no value for the money expended."

Almighty God, whispering through the twentieth century laboratory, has revealed something of the literally marvellous composition of an egg, but these egg imitators are not really striving to duplicate God's handiwork.

The fact that an egg three weeks after its appearance in the nest is capable of producing a chick so well developed that the moment it leaves the shell it is able not only to walk but to eat the same food as the adult, proves that the egg itself must contain all those mysterious substances upon which growth, development, and the maintenance of an energetic organism depend.

THE EGG.

Pondering over God's work, the chemist finds that the egg contains lecithin, phosphorized fat, phospholipins, phosphatids, conalbumen, ovamucin, ovamucoid, ovovitelein, ovalbumins, glycin, alanin, valin, leucin, prolin, phenylalanin, aspartic acid, glutanic acid, serin, tryosin, cystin, histidin, arginin, lysin, trytophan, calcium, magnesium, potassium, sodium, phosphorous, chlorine sulphur, iron hæmatogen, and so on down the long line of complex structures from which the body of a living animal emerges.

The iron of the egg is in itself a work of wonder, furnishing all of this element needed for normal nutrition in a form that cannot be replaced by the iron of medicines or mineral waters.

The iron protein compounds of the egg furnish the material from which the hæmoglobin of the blood is actually made. The richness of the egg yolk in this food iron as well as its richness in the complex phosphorus and calcium compounds upon which life, development, and health depend so much, inspires an admiration for the egg as God makes it, which man never yet succeeded in putting into a beautifully labelled package of dyed cornstarch.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture must have realized the awe-inspiring difference between an honest egg and the miserable artificial substitutes which it has so scathingly denounced.

"Four ounces, the largest amount found in any one of the egg saving frauds, would have a nutritive value of less than one-sixth that of the number of eggs it claims to replace. In most of them the ratio is even less than this," declares Commissioner Foust.

SILLY AS THEIR NAMES.

"To replace any article of the daily dietary," he continues, "with a product costing one-third as much, but having one-sixth or one-eighth of its nutritive value, is certainly not in the interests of the consumer nor a real blow at the high cost of living.

"In some few of the forty-two products now hanging their heads in shame, great stress is laid upon the fact that real egg is present. These are rare indeed, and are appearing on the market only on account of the ruling of several food departments of other states, in which the product may not use the syllable "egg" in the title unless it actually contains at least 51 per cent. of egg.

"Even in these few instances, when egg is actually present, the element of deception still persists, for the directions for use state that one teaspoonful of the powder will replace one egg in contradiction of the incontrovertible fact that the most concentrated form of dehydrated egg requires about four teaspoonfuls of the material to represent one egg.

"The dyestuffs which are present constitute another element of deception for which there can be no legitimate defense. Their purpose is to make the cake or ice cream possess an appearance of egg richness not warranted by the composition.

"The names of the products," he comments, "are silly or meaningless, and if strung together would serve as a college yell."

SMASH THEM, HE URGES.

"As a class these egg savers are inimical to the welfare of the consuming public. If an economical housekeeper wants to deprive her children of the virtue of real eggs, she can do so by taking four tablespoonsfuls of milk and a half teaspoonful of corn starch, which will accomplish at the expense of a fraction of a cent what these fake egg savers are designed to accomplish at from fifteen to twenty times as much."

If a few more food authorities like James Foust spoke out as he speaks food frauds would soon run to cover.

He says: "The brightest light of publicity should be shed upon these products, and the heaviest weight of official authority should be invoked to discourage their manufacture and sale."

Certainly this is plain advice to his brother officials in other states, although few will follow it.

He also says: "These egg savers afford an opportunity for unpatriotic profiteering. They are frauds; their claims are either deliberate misstatements or ambiguous phrases, and they serve no purpose that can not be served much more cheaply by articles in daily use in every household."

DON'T HOLD YOUR NOSE.

The following additions to the list of egg substitutes published in The Globe Saturday speak for themselves, but you need not hold your nose.

Egis—Made by the Egis Company, Inc., Seattle, Wash. This is one of the egg savers which was offered to the Globe Pure Food Directory a year ago and rejected on the spot. "It is used instead of eggs in cakes, doughnuts, etc. Composed of certain parts of casein, starch, sod. bicard., and napthol yellow. Two oz., 25 cents." Only $2 a pound! ! !

Eg-No—Made by Commercial Laboratories, Inc., Newark, N. Y. "Pure and wholesome. Make eggs unnecessary. One and a half oz., 10 cents. Use as one dozen eggs. Not recommended as a food." What, then is it for?

Eg-Save—Made by Eg-Save Co., Buffalo, N. Y. "Use Eg-Save in place of eggs. One-half teaspoonful for each egg called for." Try it as a shampoo.

Fletcher's Eg-Conserver—Made by Fletcher Production Company, Chicago, Ill. "Pure, wholesome. No artificial coloring. Four ounces, 25 cents. Use in place of three dozen eggs." Contains more than 50 per cent. endyed cornstarch.

Miracle Egg Displacer—Made by Standard Supply Company, Reading, Pa. "Pure and wholesome. Conforms with all pure food laws. Contains no egg and is artificially colored. Four ounces, 30 cents." Proud of its egglessness.

NON-SKID EGGS.

Near-Egg—Made by Peters Manufacturing Company, Ridgewood, N. J. "Wholesome and harmless substitute for eggs. No eggs used in the manufacture of this product." Positively!

No-Eg—Made by No-Eg Sales Company, Buffalo, N. Y. "Not an egg product. A substitute for eggs." An egg with wings flies away, but No-Eg wingless comes home to stay. Two and one-eighth ounces, 25 cents. Use in place of four dozen eggs." Will not hatch. Will not skid.

No-Egg-Repeater. Made by W. A. Kittredge Company, Tunkhannock, Pa. "Does the work of eggs. One ounce, 10 cents. Equals ten eggs." No-Eg spelled with one g not like No-Egg spelled with two. Compare their claims.

O-Egg-O—Made by the Penn Specialty Company, Hanover, Pa. "Pure and wholesome. Contains no eggs. Always fresh. One and one-half ounces, 10 cents. Use as twelve eggs. Makes richer cakes than eggs." What a pity God didn't know about the Penn Specialty Company when He conceived the first egg.

Paragon Egg Substitute—Made by Paragon Products Company, Pen Argyle, Pa. "Nutritious, tasteless, and wholesome. Fully equal to the best fresh eggs. Twenty-five cents' worth equals three dozen eggs." Food manufacturers don't care what they say about their products.

Sa-Van-Egg—Made by the Nacma Company, Chicago. "Delicious and wholesome. Use in place of three dozen eggs in cooking and baking only." Not recommended for hen-fruiting leather-lunged tragedians. Must be confined to cooking and baking. Otherwise will not be responsible for conduct.

Sav-a-egg—H. C. Royce. Made in Pennsylvania at Horsham, with the accent not on the Hor. "One level teaspoonful equals one egg." Nothing is said about the presence of coal tar, but it's there, all right, like the "sham" in Horsham.

STARTING NEW LANGUAGE.

Shobe Special—Made by Wright Imp. Corp., 136 Water Street, New York. No label on package. The stuff contains coal tar, potato starch, tapioca starch, rice starch, and corn starch. If there was any other kind of starch available it would be present.

Stewart Special—Made by Wright Imp. and Exp. Co., New York City. No label on package. The stuff contains coal tar, potato starch, tapioca starch, rice starch, and corn starch, but only half the mineral matter found in Shobe Special, made by the same concern.

Wizz-o-la—Made by Gandolfo-Ghio Mfg. Co., St. Louis, Mo. "Contains powdered egg. Pure, wholesome, economical. Artificially colored. One level teaspoonful equals one egg." Wizz-o-la is one of the rawest frauds of the bunch. It consists chiefly of corn starch, whereas the label indicates it to be powdered eggs.

Wizzola Gandolfo Ghio is the Sanskrit for Dolfo Ganghio la Wizzo, which is Arabic for Ganola Dolghio Wiz, all of which in Americanese means six kinds of bunk bunked in the same bunk.

Yelco—Made by the Yelco Pure Products Company, Minneapolis, Minn. "A New pure food product. Use for all baking and cooking only, instead of eggs. Composed of powdered milk, rice flour, bicarbonate of soda, cream of tartar, tartaric acid, powdered tumeric, corn starch." Nothing said on the label concerning the simple fact that it consists of 50 per cent. starch.

Such products as Groan-O, Fake-O, Soak-Em-Hard-O, Egg-O-Snitcher, Non-Omelet-O, Break-a-Legg-O, Egg-O-Defunct-O, Con-Eg-Game-O, Lame-Legg-O, Rot-and-Spot-O, Lal-La-Pa-Lu-Zo, and Pop-u-Lo-Be-Dam-O are yet to be heard from.

FOODLESS FOOD SUBSTITUTES ATTACK HEALTH OF AMERICA.

By Alfred W. McCann.

From the Globe and Commercial Advertiser, New York.

Now that we have to deal with at least forty-two eggless egg substitutes which cannot be scrambled, omeletted, souffled, fried, soft or hard boiled, but which do not possess any of the nutritive value of the egg, except in appearance, it is time to treat seriously the attack made by foodless foods on the young and their mothers.

The eggless egg may make the idler laugh, but it causes the judicious to grieve.

The egg has a definite food value. Without it many an otherwise poorly nourished school child would not live at all.

The eggless egg substitute is the enemy of America, just as truly as is the kaiser.

The kaiser's hordes can destroy life in the trenches where, in spite of their hellish devices, our boys are able to defend themselves.

But here at home craftily, stealthily working among our growing children, are the slow moving forces of destruction which creep in unnoticed and attack so quietly that a defense against them is rarely dreamed of because the attack itself is rarely traced to its real origin.

SUBSTITUTES AND SUBSTITUTES.

There is no substitute for eggs, yet we have egg substitutes.

There is no substitute for butter, yet we have buttter substitutes.

Butter fat performs a special function in the maintenance of the health of adults and in the control of the development of the young.

Clean and decent butter substitutes are legitimate enough in the generous diet of the well-to-do, but because they lack the growth-promoting substances which are also lacked in white bread, they have no business in the diet of children fed largely on white bread and other refined grain products.

We have synthetic milks in the form of skim milk powder, treated with alkali in a manner that destroys the vital substances so necessary to the growing child.

And most of the ice cream now in the market is composed of manufactured raw materials consisting of lifeless fat homogenized with lifeless casein, lifeless sugar, lifeless coal tar dye, and lifeless flavoring materials to serve as an adjunct for the impoverished and lifeless diet of the underfed.

Today the country reeks with breadless bread. Our big bakers and our little bakers are vying with each other in the production of white loaves, just as white as the loaves they used to make from white wheat flour, although now their loaves are almost wheatless.

DEADLY WHITE.

The whiteness is derived from white corn flour, from which the life-controlling solubles are removed in the refining process, and white rice flour, which is merely the dead starch, upon which all our classical beri-beri and pellagra experiments have been conducted.

Our government knows that these refined cereals are truly foodless foods, but still the onrush of foodless substitutes continues.

quate food which formerly stood between them and mal-nutrition. Milk was the one barrier that held back the attack of those physical infirmities that always follow an inadequate diet.

Milk was the offsetting food the children of the poor relied on to compensate meagrely enough for the deficiencies of refined breadstuffs.

Today their off-setting food has been reduced in quantity to an appalling degree, and in its place they eat more and more of the degerminated starches so abhorred by swine-men, cattle-men, dairy-men, and poultry-men.

Corn starch and corn oil they have aplenty. Potato starch and cottonseed oil are abundant. Rice starch and tapioca starch are likewise at hand. Wheat starch in the form of farina and other breakfast foods of the farina type, are sold in every store.

Starch crackers, starch cakes, starch biscuits, starch wafers, starch rolls, starch buns, starch, starch, starch, sweep in like the waves of the sea, and the baker howling for egg substitutes and the milk substitutes heaps up piles of artificial yellow stuff upon which not even white mice or guinea pigs can live.

WHO SHALL STOP IT?

What is to stop the foodless food epidemic in America?

Shall the Food Administration attempt it?

Shall the Department of Agriculture attempt it?

Shall the Department of Justice attempt it?

The United States Public Health Service has sounded warning after warning, but the warnings are not applied.

The millers go on, the bakers go on, the specialty manufacturers go on, and train-load after train-load of sterilized nutrition is dumped upon humanity without those very elements that have been found indispensable to life.

War we are told chastens mad men and makes serious the frivolous.

We know that our children are the second line of defense, yet as to their nourishment we are still mad and frivolous.

The Bureau of Mortality Statistics at Washington reminds us annually of our dreadful neglect of the children.

We bury nearly 500,000 children under ten years of age every year in the United States and say nothing about the tragedy in the newspapers.

The parade of the little white caskets does not excite the emotions of our war correspondents, who get their descriptions of the sinking of a trawler on the front page.

Let us have substitutes for leather, substitutes for wool, substitutes for silk, substitutes for rubber.

THE ENEMY WITHIN.

Let us have substitutes all along the line as war-winning measures, but let us pause when we begin to substitute for food.

We know now that food is not food at all unless it contains all the substances elaborated by Mother Nature operating under fixed laws, the wisdom of which the most sullen and unresponsive soul must recognize as of divine origin.

Hundreds of thousands of fertile acres are now producing wheat and corn for humanity, but humanity from all the riches of the grain, will extract the starch and gluten for itself and shift the vitalizing salts, solubles, and extractives to the swine pen and poultry yard.

Humanity knows how necessary are these rejected keystones of the health arch to the welfare of beasts, but foolishly assumes that man and his children can endure without them.

The days of the food substitute should be numbered, for the food substitute is the enemy not only of civilization in general, but of America in particular, and the reconstruction period that will follow the war. It is the enemy within our gates.

MARGARINE FROM FISH OILS.

A process has been discovered in Norway by which a butter substitute can be manufactured exclusively from Norwegian fish oils. According to a report in a Norwegian newspaper a committee of Norwegian Provisions Department has succeeded in manufacturing a butter substitute from fish oils which is as good as any of the best kinds of margarine hitherto placed on the market in Norway. The production of the substitute will, it is stated, be undertaken by a refinery which alone can produce sufficient to cover the requirements of the country. The Provisions Director will purchase the fish oils required. In addition to whale oil, all kinds of fish oils will be used, and particularly oil from herrings. It is anticipated that the new butter substitute would be placed on the market about the beginning of December. It will probably be dearer than ordinary margarine.

FOOD CONTROL OFFICIALS ADMIT CITY BROTHERS TO MEMBERSHIP.

Take Important Action on Dairy and Food Matters at Convention Marked by War-Time Activity.

Municipal food and drug officials are made eligible to membership in the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials as the result of a constitutional amendment passed at the twenty-second annual convention in Chicago. Heretofore, the organization has been limited only to federal and state officials, the proposal of admitting city health officers charged with food and drug control having been a source of much debate. War-time conditions opened the way for the passage of the amendment, which, it is predicted, will greatly increase the membership of the association and the scope of its activities.

"A thoroughly harmonious meeting without a note of discord in which the spirit of co-operation and patriotic endeavor was uppermost and gratifying to us all," was the way in which Commissioner James Foust, of Pennsylvania, retiring President, characterized this year's convention.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President, Benjamin L. Purcell, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Virginia.

Second Vice-President, E. L. Barnhouse, Food and Drug Commissioner, Missouri.

Third Vice-President, Thomas Holt, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Connecticut.

Treasurer, George J. Weigle, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Wisconsin.

Secretary, John B. Newman, Superintendent of Foods and Dairies, Illinois.

Those appointed on the Executive Committee are:

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,

Guy G. Frary, Chairman, Food and Drug Commissioner, South Dakota.

George L. Flanders, Counsel, Department of Farms and Markets, New York.

Dr. E. F. Ladd, Food Commissoner, North Dakota.

COMMITTEE ON CO-OPERATION,

J. S. Abbott, Chairman, Chief of the Office of State Co-operative Food and Drug Control, Federal Bureau of Chemistry.

R. E. Rose, State Chemist, Department of Agriculture, Florida.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Other important action taken by the convention through the adoption of resolutions deals with the following:

A great and unnecessary waste is declared to attend the collection and shipment of cream for manufacturing purposes, and recommendation is made that the Federal Food Administrator and the Director General of Railroads investigate and take action to remedy the situation.

The pledge whereby the members agree to support and assist Herbert C. Hoover "by all means in their power" is renewed.

Existing associations of food manufacturers are indorsed and a more complete organization of their forces is advocated as a means of furnishing a fuller measure of co-operation with food control officials in the consideration of proposed regulations than is possible through individual effort.

Only members who have no financial interest in the manufacture of food, dairy and drug products, are to be permitted membership on the Joint Committee on Definitions and Standards.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

It was pointed out in support of the amendment to admit to membership city food control officials that the general public, through exigencies brought about by the war, now has acquired a greater knowledge and appreciation of food and food conditions than in any past decade. Progress in this direction is reflected by a wide-spread and urgent demand for the most competent officials obtainable to meet food problems and take charge of the enforcement of regulations in our cities. As a result, the city food and drug control officer is better qualified than ever before to take part in the deliberations of state and federal officials.

In order to more clearly set forth the objects of the Association, Article 2 of the constitution was amended to read:

"The object of the Association is to promote and foster the enactment and enforcement of such legislation as will protect public health and prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture, and sale of foods and drugs, to promote uniformity in such laws and co-operate in their enforcement."

The amendment admitting city officials to membership was adopted as follows:

"The voting members of the Association shall consist of the Secretary of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the executive officer or officers of the state laws regulating the sale of drugs and of dairy and other food products and the administrator's officer in charge of city ordinances or laws relating to the sale of drugs and of dairy and other products, or in their absence, such officers subordinate to them in the administration of the laws relating to the sale of drugs and of dairy and other food products and as they may designate by proper credentials."

A WAR-TIME CONVENTION.

It was essentially a war-time convention, this fact being brought out strongly by President Foust in his opening address, and further emphasized a few minutes later when Lieut. G. M. Sauvage, attired in the blue uniform of the French army, stepped to the platform and told how food conserved in the United States and its exportation abroad had aided the morale of the civilian population and the troops in his country.

In part, President Foust said:

"It is our duty to conserve food and safeguard their wholesomeness, and in this field our responsibilities are large. Let us use all our official powers and personal influence, and make every adjustment or regulation that can be made to save for human food every available ounce of wholesome food. While we aid in readjustment let us continue to insist upon honesty. Let food be sold for exactly what it is. To encourage or permit one part of the people to fool the rest of the people is not to be excused under any circumstances and is especially reprehensible in these critical times."

The proceedings lasted four days, August 27 to 30, sessions being held in the Florentine room of the Congress Hotel. Food and drug control officials representing the national government, a great many of the states, important municipalities, and foreign countries were in attendance. The food trade and industry were also well represented.

The program included addresses and discussions relating to food nutrition and conservation, standards and definitions, law enforcement methods, sanitation of food establishments and health of employes, army food supplies, the effect of the war on food industries and many other topics of a scientific and technical nature relating to food and food control. Food scarcity and high prices and the temptation afforded unscrupulous dealers and manufacturers to place upon the market unhealthful substitutes and inferior products were also discussed.

At the Association dinner Thursday evening, W. A. Milne, of the U. S. Food Administration, was the principal guest of honor. He has been a member of the staff of the Food Administration for the past nine months, and his work for some time has been the directing of speakers sent out by this branch of the government in this country and abroad. Mr. Milne spoke on "Winning the War." He especially commended the spirit of the American people in the way they have co-operated in voluntary rationing, and pointed out the duty that devolves upon those at home to continue to strive for maximum production and to practice the strictest economy and thrift to keep our constantly increasing military and naval forces as well as those of our allies, adequately supplied with food and other necessities that the war may be won as soon as possible. Women, he said, were an indispensable factor for the success of the war. He paid high tribute to the sacrifices of women in France and England, explaining how they are cheerfully performing laborious work to release the man power in those countries for the fighting lines. Mr. Milne read a telegram from Herbert C. Hoover thanking the members of the Association for their aid and spirit of co-operation. Wilbur D. Nesbit ably carried out his role as toastmaster and contributed greatly to the success of the occasion.

ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIVE FEATURES.

No sessions were held in the afternoon and to utilize this time to advantage, the delegates participated in educational tours and trips of inspection including visits to wholesale grocery houses, important creameries, the large cold storage plants, the Union Stock Yards, the Corn Products Refining Company's plant at Argo and other places which contribute to Chicago's supremacy as a food center. Some of the commissioners visited the Ghetto in order to study conditions under which food is handled and dispensed in the crowded tenement district. The large egg-breaking establishments in the Chicago district also came in for attention.

Wednesday a special train took the delegates to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. In addition to witnessing special drills and maneuvers by the men in training, the commissary branch was inspected. How Uncle Sam feeds his enlisted men was explained in detail to the food officials who made the most of the opportunity to study the way food is stored, prepared, cooked and served to the 45,000 jackies in training at the station.

Those of the delegates who remained over for Saturday, visited the dairy section of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin as far as Oconomowoc where they looked over the large herd of Holstein-Friesian cattle belonging to the Carnation Farms Company at that point.

In appreciation for their part in adding to the success of the convention and for the courtesies extended to the delegates, resolutions were passed expressing thanks and cordial appreciation to President

James Foust "for efficient services in arranging for the convention"; to John B. Newman, Secretary, "to whose constant and indefatigable efforts so much of the success of the convention is due"; to W. A. Bodey, Charles Healey and other members of the Chicago Committee of Arrangements "for the splendid entertainment provided and many courtesies extended to the individual members and their ladies"; to Frank A. Smith, of Pennsylvania, "for his untiring care contributing to the comfort of the members," and to others who rendered valuable service.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Mr. Purcell, the new President, is broadly qualified for the position. He has been a farmer, a dairyman and a wholesale druggist. He was the first president of the American Association of Feed Control Officials, elected to that office in 1910.

In 1908 he was appointed Assistant Dairy and Food Commissioner of the State of Virginia and four years later was promoted to take charge as head of the department, his term of office expiring in 1920. In addition, he is Assistant to the Federal Food Administrator in his state.

He was graduated from a foremost Virginia university in 1880, and is a member of the Greek Letter Fraternity "A. T. O." He is a leading member of the Social Club of Richmond and of the Business Men's Club of that city.

On account of the arduous duties entailed as Assistant to the Food Administrator of Virginia, Mr. Purcell was granted a temporary leave of absence from his position as Dairy and Food Commissioner, but still retains general supervision of the dairy and food work of this department; is in constant touch with and directs the general policy of this branch of the state government.

He is an orator of renown and a presiding officer of ability.

DUTIES OF THE HEALTH OFFICER.

Address delivered at the recent Convention of Dairy and Food Officials at Chicago by John W. Wright, Health Officer, Erie, Pa.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

It is obvious that the function of a Health Officer in a community of any size is chiefly executive, hence his relations with those who directly come in touch with the control and management of food products must be, to a very great extent, through the medium of departmental employes working under his supervision.

In order therefore for a Health Officer to properly develop his work it is necessary for him to have a staff of employes who are thoroughly interested in the subject at hand. In addition to this, each person thus engaged should be fully informed as to what constitutes pure and wholesome food supplies from the source of production to the detailed point of distribution.

To obtain this information it is essential at the present time that food inspectors receive thorough training for this work either through the medium of an institution where special instruction of this character may be given, or intensive work under the direction of a thoroughly informed officer in one of our larger cities, or of some up-to-date State Department.

With such prelminary requirements, a moderate degree of enthusiasm and a willingness to carry out in detail the rules and regulations of an active Health Department, a food inspector should be able to give his chief, sufficient knowledge of the subject in hand as to enable him to work out in detail such phases of food inspection as the individual case may require. Work of this character will necessitate frequent direct supervision from one higher up in authority.

Under ordinary conditions, with a simple, direct food code, and a card index form which covers the essential points of the work in a few terse terms, all needful outlines may be readily placed before the chief's eyes in such a manner as will enable him to quickly and readily grasp all details of essential importance.

I am not presenting to your body any forms covering this work, as I know that such are already used by you, also that any I might submit would be but copies or modified duplicates of those with which you are already familiar. With this prelude, I am certain that the subject of my paper can be disposed of in a very few words.

The duty of the Health Officer is to see that employes working under his direction carefully carry out the details of such food regulations as may be provided for by his local municipal code, in the absence of which, the laws and regulations provided by the proper Bureau of the State should be used as a standard for such procedure. In extreme instances, where neither local nor state regulations are available the admirable code of the United States Department of Agriculture may be used with most satisfactory results, as a standard for work of this character.

The Health Officer should not permit himself to become a perfunctory personage, and should not, even when satisfied that he has thoroughly competent help, be content with their work, but should make it a point, regardless of the size of his community, to inform himself personally regarding the conditions existing in places where food is prepared and from which it may be distributed for general or individual consumption. Admitting that in larger cities this may seem an almost impossible task, yet it is a simple matter while waiting for our luncheon or dinner, to acquaint ourselves with the management of the place and let them know we are taking a personal interest in the detail workings of their establishment. This while seemingly a small matter, has, in my personal experience, resulted in material changes for the better in many types of eating places, ranging from the modest lunch counter to the more pretentious hostelry. It is obvious, in detail work of this character, that many conditions arise in small or medium sized cities which cannot be carried out without the assistance of higher authorities. In the State of Pennsylvania, we are fortunate in having a most efficient Food and Dairy Department, which we have always found ready, when called upon, to come to our aid with efficient inspectors and experts, when the Health Officer appealed to it for aid. Through its medium, we have at all times been able to have all kinds of foods, such as meats, milk, butter and other similar products, inspected and examined by experienced detail workers. In conjunction with this our State Livestock Sanitary Association looks after, in careful detail, the herds from which these products are obtained.

Through the medium of our State Department of Health, the health and general sanitary conditions of the individuals producing these foods are supervised and, in a well regulated and properly controlled city Health Department all the materials for a detailed study of diseases conveyed by food are to be found.

With this fund of information at hand, it is a small matter for the city Health Officer, either directly, or through his chiefs of divisions, to supply the State or Governmental Inspectors with definite data at any and all times concerning local food conditions, thus enabling such an official, on very brief notice, to make a thorough and efficient survey of the district involved.

JOHN W. WRIGHT, M. D.,
Health Officer, Erie, Pa.

SYNOPSIS OF ADDRESS BY W. A. MILNE, OF THE UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION.

The following is a synopsis of Mr. Milne's address at the Chicago meeting of Food Officials:

In opening his address on the subject "Winning the War," W. A. Milne, of the United States Food Administration, described the war as a race between Germany and the United States. He stated that because of our tardiness in entering this race we are now forced to overcome a terrific handicap. We entered it at a time when Germany had already gained absolute control of a territory of 862,660 square miles with a population of over 76,000,000 people. He displayed several large wall maps and charts visualizing these gains, one of which was a map of the United States with all of the territory from the Atlantic to the Mississippi River shown in black, this being about equal in area and population to the new territory gained by the Germans in the first four years of the war.

After describing the collapse of Russia he said: "Let us be slow to blame and quick to pity and to help! Let us remember that for three weary years these people had bared their breasts to the oncoming Huns, and that five million of them were sacrificed for a cause that was ours as well as theirs. Let us remember that our own freedom was born in pain, and that a half million brave sons of the North and South laid down their lives that our black slaves be free; and remembering, let us throw over these poor souls groping out of many years of blackness of serfdom into the broad light of a free day, the mantel of charity and hold up high before their straining, bloodshot eyes the lamp of hope!"

He stated that until March of this year the Allies did not comprehend the full consequences of Russia's collapse, and until then they continued to ask us for material and money rather than for men.

"But," said he, "the Russian revolution and the anarchy which led to the demoralization of the Russian army, in real fact made it impossible for France and Britain to win the war, and made success for the Germans patent to at least the Germans themselves, and to neutrals. From August, 1917, onward the hope of the Germans was to crush France and Britain before America could arrive, just as she sought to crush them in 1914 before the slow, clumsy mobilization of Russia could be effected."

He described the heroic efforts of the British, French and Italians in 1917, who met defeat after defeat, and yet doggedly held on.

"Thus," said he, "the calendar year and the campaign of 1917 ended amid the most gloomy of all possible circumstances, and the allied hope of a major offensive in 1918 had now to be surrendered, and the allied command was forced to recognize that there was no longer any chance for a victory in 1918, nor at any time until America should be able to replace Russia in the battle line.

"For the enemy the new year dawned brilliantly. He could look forward to a return to the west now with his armies victorious in the east, he could look to superiority in guns and men. He had some forty divisions more than his enemies, exclusive of the Americans—and he felt that in 1918 the little makeshift army of Sammies was worthy only of contempt!"

NO PEACE IN SIGHT.

He dwelt upon the improbability of an early peace, saying:

"Had peace been declared this spring its terms would have been dictated by Germany, glutted with the spoils of conquest and strong to enforce her relentless will upon her vanquished foes. Her dream of Mitteleuropia would have been more than fulfilled and she would be given time to prepare for the next great war whose objective would be to make her mistress of the world.

"Peace without annexation or indemnity—bosh! That will never be accepted by Germany so long as a Hohenzollern remains in power. In 1914 the Kaiser wrote in an album dedicated to glorification of Germany's greatness, the following:

"Wherever a German in the faithful fulfillment of his duty lies buried, having fallen for his Fatherland, and wherever the German eagle has planted his claws in the soil—such land is German and will remain German forever!"

"The first step to take to get that notion out of the Kaiser's head is to cut off his head; then take your time about the balance of the operation!

"But peace did not come. Grimly, doggedly, passionately, the gallant British, French and Italians held on, while the young sons of America drilled in the snows of an exceptionally severe winter. Bled white with four years of war, and realizing in part what a doubtful struggle must come with spring, yet our allies held on, and the burden of their faith was "America, you have always played square, you have always made good—we trust you!"

"In view of the facts I have just given you and while facing the outstretched, pleading, shadowy arms of the wraiths of three million noble men who, 'as He died to make men holy, they have died to make men free,' and realizing that these millions of souls have been returned to their God without a moment's time of preparation—all that you and I might continue to breathe the air of freedom; in the face of all this, and knowing that these suffering peoples are absolutely dependent upon us for the bread they eat and for the men they have lost, how can any real American listen to the whinings of spineless pacifists! How can any two-fisted son of this free soil tolerate the few traitors who are still among us, and the few gibbering, petticoated men among us who would counsel peace by compromise at such a time as this!"

"The day of peace is not yet near at hand. And before it is reached we must steel ourselves to wade through seas of blood to that same Calvary where millions of noble men have been crucified for the preservation of the same ideals, which we cherish and must defend. We must steel ourselves to the certainty that nothing short of the downfall of the Hohenzollern family will end the war, and that before it is over, hundreds of thousands of American homes may be in mournings. There is no escape. We are unalterably pledged not to deal with the present government of Germany. What does that mean? There can be no peace while the Kaiser remains enthroned; there can be no peace while Belgium bleeds; while Serbia is enslaved, while all the 76,000,000 freemen now under the heel of Germany suffer and die. Let no one, through ignorance of the facts or through a malicious wish to slow up your part in the war, hint to you of an early peace. Brand such a man as a fool or a pro-German.

"What does our government think of the length of the war? Judge from the fact that it is thinking in terms of 5,000,000 fighting men abroad, and that all its contracts and its plans are upon this stupendous basis. Judge from the fact that many millions are to be spent upon an eastern plant to turn out an immense number of large field guns, and that the first gun from that factory cannot be ready to ship for two years! And your Uncle Samuel has earned a world-wide reputation for long-headedness. Is it likely in this crisis his wits have failed him."

CRITICS CONFOUNDED.

Speaking of what the United States has accomplished in its first year at war, Mr. Milne said:

"One of the easiest things we do in this country is to criticize our government and each other. And there has been, until lately, a vast amount of unreasoning criticism which has been very sweet to the ears of our enemies. Mistakes have been made; there has been waste. Such was unavoidable in the rapid organization of a peaceful, unprepared, wealthy nation for a major part in the greatest war in all history. Our mistakes and our wastes have been infinitesimal compared with those of Britain during the first years of the war; and our accomplishments in our first year of effort are at once the admiration and the wonder of the world. Even Congress laughed and scolded Secretary of War Baker for his assertion that before the end of 1918 one million men would be abroad. With still five months to spare, 1,273,000 are now in France, and we're sending them over at the rate of 250,000 per month!

"And to equip them the Ordnance Department has actually delivered over 2,000,000 rifles, two billion cartridges, 82,540 machine guns, and is now producing 2,000,000 hand grenades and 1,000,000 rifle grenades per month. We have produced over 40,000 machine guns and are only beginning. In aircraft we have delivered over 6,000 planes, and our merchant marine has now grown to 10,000,000 tons, and 10,000 tons of shipping are being launched every twenty-four hours.

FOOD SAVING.

been the willing, the cheerful sacrifice of a large percentage of our people in the matter of food. No other warring nation has felt it safe to take a chance on the voluntary saving of food by its people. All of them are on a rigid card-rationing basis. When Herbert Hoover consented to take charge of our Food Administration it was with a firmly-rooted conviction that a self-governing democracy could be successfully appealed to, that such a democracy could justify its existence by voluntarily doing the right and the square thing. Our Allies feared the result, very many of our own people feared it still more; but Hoover's passionate belief in the innate goodness and fairness of the American people has been justified a thousandfold!

"What have we done? In the matter of wheat our visible exportable surplus from the 1917 crop was 20,000,000 bushels; we have actually shipped abroad, out of the 1917 crop, 141,000,000 bushels! We have shipped much more than our Allies declared as their minimum! And all that we have shipped is what you and I voluntarily saved, not because we must, but because we knew we should.

"In beef our ordinary pre-war shipments were 2,000,000 pounds monthly; in one single month this past year we have shipped 87,000,000 pounds, and our total increase in actual shipments in 1917-1918 over our shipment of 1916-1917, amounts to 844,600,000 pounds!

"In pork our ordinary rate of shipment has been 50,000,000 pounds monthly; during one month of this year we shipped 308,000,000 pounds!"

He warned against over-confidence and against reckless wastes of food, and stated that only by a very narrow margin had we gotten through to this harvest. How narrow that margin was he described as follows:

"Last December Clemenceau, the Premier of France, cabled Herbert Hoover that the minimum requirement of the Allies would be 11,000,000 bushels of wheat per month, and asked what maximum shipment could be expected monthly from the United States. France and England were then skating on very thin ice with only a few days supply on hand. Breathlessly he waited the reply refusing to leave his desk to eat or to sleep. The afternoon waned and night fell and still no reply; and still the little anxious group waited for the word that meant victory or defeat; and, outside, three nations of half-fed men, women and children waited, waited for America's answer. Near midnight the cable came and when decoded it read: "We can send you two million bushels per month."

"My God, we are beaten! The war is over!" murmured several of the little group, and silent, bitter tears coursed down the bronzed cheeks of these big men. But Clemenceau gripped his desk with both hands and his big keen eyes flashed fire. "I don't believe it! It isn't true! The Americans can be trusted; they'll do their part! There's some mistake. Cable at once asking them to repeat their message!"

"All night long they waited while cheeks grew pale and eyes grew bloodshot and every man lived a lifetime of suffering during that dreadful night. No thought of food or rest; not a word spoken. At daybreak came the repeated message and with trembling hands Clemenceau opened it. It read 'We can send twelve million bushels per month.' And they had only asked for 11,000,000! An error had been made in coding the first cable. Clemenceau bowed his head in prayer—'Lafayette, you have not been forgotten.'

"When Mr. Hoover sent that cable he did not have the wheat to send, but he did have a sublime confidence in the good faith and unselfishness of his beloved America. You have justified him and he has more than made good his promise.

"We got under the wire; but is it wisdom for any nation at war to take such a chance with victory in the balance and millions of lives at stake? We must lay up tremendous reserves of food both here and abroad out of this abundant harvest. We must prepare for a war the end of which no man can see, and we must fortify against the lean years which may come to us. We can afford no longer to take such a long chance and gamble with the fortunes of war. We still must save, not because we have not enough wheat and meat in sight for our present needs and the present needs of our Allies, for that for the moment is assured; but because we must look for a decreased yield as a larger number of our farmer boys are called to the colors, and God may not be always as kind to us as He has been this year in giving us bountiful harvests. As the corn laid up in Egypt saved the day, so must our reserves save our Allies and us in the long struggle which is inevitable. That is only good horse sense, and as our hearts moved us to save and ship in 1917-1918, so let our heads move us to save, ship, and store in 1918-1919."

MEEKNESS COUNSELLED.

Deploring our tendency to boastfulness, Mr. Milne said:

"But, while we have done wonderfully well for a beginning, we have not yet caught the full spirit of this war, we have not yet begun to sacrifice; and instead of strutting like peacocks we should walk with bared heads and in humility beside the veterans of Britain, France and Italy, who have toiled their weary way bent beneath their cross to the Calvary of the nations. The United States will not be spared a single inch of that way and there have been no tears shed by the motherhood of the Allied nations that our own mothers here will not shed. We will send our men with the same glad enthusiastic ardor that they have been sent out of their British, French and Italian homes, and they will give just as good an account of themselves. But we must knit our brows to the daily grind. We have come to the time when we must mingle our tombs and tasks and consecrate each hour with tears!"

SACRIFICES OF BRITAIN.

Mr. Milne outlined the work of the women of England, showing that 260,000 English girls from gentle homes had enlisted for the term of the war at twenty-five cents a day, and that their work had increased the acreage of England three and one-half million acres and made England one-third sustaining; how the trains, street cars, elevators are all run by women, and how they are doing work in the factories where many of them have shaved off their hair, and where the chemicals have turned their faces a permanent yellow. He told of the work of over one million English girls in France, the Tommywacks, and said:

"Over five million of the women of England, many of them mothers, fifty and sixty years old, are carrying on in these ways, all of them bearing this physical burden and many, very many of them bearing the greater burden of a sorrow that cannot be appeased until the grave gives back its dead; and not a word of complaint, but a look of divine exaltation upon their faces; for they have caught a glimpse of what a German world would mean—and they just carry on!

"Oh, women of America, much as you have done for the Red Cross, for the conservation of food, for every other war activity, dare you whisper your efforts and call them sacrifices in the light of such things as these! You have not as yet touched the hem of the garment of sacrifice. But you must soon wrap yourselves in its folds, and when that day comes you will do it just as bravely, just as willingly as your English sisters have done. God grant it may be withheld from you a little longer!"

He told how Britain and her colonies had raised an army of 7,500,000 men, and how their casualties had been 2,500,000 men. In proportion to population this would mean an army of 20,000,000 in the United States with a casualty list of 7,000,000; of how her navy had transported 13,000,000 men, 2,000,000 horses and mules, half a million vehicles, 25,000,000 tons of explosives, 57,000,000 tons of fuel, and 130,000,000 tons of food and other stores; and it had meanwhile enabled America to make billions of profit and had protected our homes, our children and the honor of our women. Deploring a certain anti-British feeling in this country, Mr. Milne said:

"Any man calling himself an American who sneers at Great Britain in the light of these facts is both a fool and a traitor. We must remember that the England of today is not the England of 1776, and that George III, against whom we fought in that day was a German, not an Anglo-Saxon Prince, and that today she is fighting shoulder to shoulder with us to wipe out forever the last clinging despotism in the world—the same despotism against which we fought in 1776, and out of which Great Britain has evolved a democracy as free as our own. And now that tight little island is fighting the greatest fight and holding the longest battle line that the world has ever seen, and that line has not been broken yet, and it never will break! Don't let anybody tell you we are fighting Great Britain's battles. If we start off tomorrow and do fifty per cent. as well as England has done in this war we will close the war in six months, as sure as there is a God in heaven!"

SUFFERINGS OF FRANCE.

He described the destruction of Belgium and northern France, and the cruelty and barbarism of the Germans toward women and children, and said:

"These things and many others that cannot be described even in the company of men behind closed doors—these constitute German 'Kultur.' Hard to believe these things because we have felt that modern Germany must be like the good Germans we have as fellow citizens. We forget that when Germany crushed out the revolution in 1848, she drove from Germany all her liberty-loving people and sent them over to us. She gave us the best blood she had, and it has been a great contribution to us. Those who stayed behind in Germany are a polluted and perverted generation, with a philosophy that believes in cruelty in war, and in the divine right of kings, and in the doctrine that any method is just—if it wins.

"The measure of any nation can be taken from the way that nation treats its women. The Kaiser himself has defined a German's woman's sphere as confined to 'Church, Children and Kitchen.' There it is a woman's duty to revere, worship and obey her husband in everything. She has no individuality, no desire save his. No matter what he orders her to do she must do it thankfully and without question—for from one so high and sacred every command, no matter how humiliating the action ordered may be, has the sacredness of its source. So even blows or beatings are to be taken gladly; for is it not blasphemous to protest against the chastening of the Lord, and is not the German husband the Lord of his wife. So runs their philosophy.

"But his attitude was made worse by the German militarism. If a man was so superior to a woman, he became when an officer, a very god. To further the schemes of the military rulers and prepare the people for the crimes they are now committing, they were carefully taught that 'the uniform can do no wrong.' It did not matter what the officer in uniform did—once in it any action of his, no matter how despicable, shameful or wicked, became, if not exactly glorious, at least something to be neither resented nor criticized. So, if a woman got in his way or did not move quickly enough to suit him, a slap in the face or a vicious thrust with the hand sent her out into the gutter. Such blows by swaggering officers in the streets of Berlin and other cities were too common even to attract notice. No civilian's wife, daughter or sweetheart was safe from them, even when escorted by their men. It was 'the right of the uniform'—just a shade removed from the shameful old German 'right of the first night,' when military officers were privileged to take to their apartments any newly-wed peasant girl, returning her to her uncomplaining husband the next day.

"Certainly a nation whose philosophy permits it to hold its own women in such blasphemous contempt could not be expected to deal kindly or decently with the women of its enemies at war."

As illustrative of the spirit which holds the Frenchmen at their tasks, he told the following incident:

"In the great attack on Verdun there was only one road by which ammunition could be brought up, and the Germans found it out and began to shell the road, and the problem of how to carry 186,000 motor lorries with ammunition to hold the line. The Germans were ploughing up the road, and the cry went out for the old men. So all day long for three days, toward Verdun these old men swept and today they call it the Via Sacre—'The Sacred Way.' Twenty-eight thousand of them paid the price for that work, and all along that roadway are the crosses marking their graves—the graves of the men above sixty-five who died for France in 1917. An American officer who had enlisted in the French army tells us that he was wounded and was waiting in a thicket for an ambulance. He tells us how it thrilled him to see one of these old men throw up his hands and begin to reel, and while he was reeling and going down to earth to stain the white dust of the Verdun roadway into a deep brown with his blood, he would shake his clenched fist toward the German line and cry 'They shall not pass! They shall not pass!"

And, contrasting the spirit of some of us, he said:

"The other day I had a dinner at the home of a friend whose wife had caught the Hoover spirit. When she poured her husband's coffee she said to him, 'You can only have one spoonful of sugar this evening,' and he looked at her and said, 'Bessie, war is hell, isn't it?' And yet you say we're sacrificing!"

He contrasted the work of the Canadians with some of us who, when we've done a little to help refuse to do more, as we've "knit our mitt and done our bit"; and the suffering of the Italians entrenched in solid ice, with some of us who complained about heatless Mondays.

WE MUST KEEP FAITH.

The speaker in describing how our own boys are "carrying on" said:

"A story comes to us of one lad eighteen years of age, with his eye blown out, his face mutilated almost beyond recognition, his left shoulder torn off and a new bone being knitted in, his left hand to be useless forever. He was asked how old he was, and he said 'Eighteen; I had a birthday since this happened. I was seventeen then.' In one of the first trench raids on November 20, when the Germans dropped in there, he knocked his opponent's gun out of his hands, and wanting to play fair like an Anglo-Saxon sportsman, he dropped his own gun and drew his knife—a seventeen-year-old boy fighting five thousand miles away from home in the dark and cold against a trained veteran of the German army and wanting to play square! A German officer leaned over his private's shoulder and blew out the boy's eye with a revolver, and then they dropped a shell in there and destroyed both his opponents and tore off the lad's shoulder, leaving him in black darkness until he became conscious in the hospital. When questioned he said: 'I don't mind the shoulder so much because the shell that tore that off killed them two boches!" Then when he was told that he was to go home he cried, the tears stole down from that one eye, and he said: 'I cannot go! There ain't enough of us here now!' Mark the challenge that Germany made to the idealism of the Saxon youth. He said: 'Mister, have you seen what them Boches do to women? We won't let them do that to our women. I have got to stay here until more of them come. I can still shoot with one eye!' Then when his attention was called to his left hand which was useless, with all the sweet naivette of a boy, he said: 'Don't you suppose that Mr. Edison or somebody could fix up some sort of a contraption so that I could hold a bayonet with one hand? I can't go back until the rest of them come!"

"That boy meant something more than that he must wait until America's khaki-clad hosts came to finish the job. He meant he must wait until the soul of America was thoroughly aroused, and until every one of America's one hundred million men, women and children consecrated every hour of every day to the one task of winning this war. It will profit us nothing to pick out the cream of our manhood and ask that they bare their breasts to the bullets of the foe, unless we also live in their hearts.

"Now, what are we stay-at-homes going to do about it?

"It is a splendid thing that we invest out of our easily-earned surpluses in Liberty Bonds—the best investment on God's green earth; it is a splendid thing that we give to the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A; but that is nothing more than we have to do. We may do all this and send our boys out to fight with splendid equipment, guns and aircraft, and yet lose the war. The one thing absolutely necessary is food, and that is where you and I come in.

"In the second battle of Ypres, when the Canadians went across a mile and a half of open front, there were twelve thousand of them, and five out of every six Canadians dropped dead, and twelve out of every thirteen British dropped dead in those six days of battle. When they broke the first line some of these men were fighting with clubs, with rocks, with bare fists. They had only a few twisted bayonets, but they broke the German line and held it until reinforcements came up. They demonstrated that a man can fight without weapons if he has to.

"In the Somme valley there are 196,000 black crosses, the crosses of the first Prussian guard, broken by the British at the point of the bayonet when they did not have a cartridge in their belts; nor was there a shell behind the lines because with their shelling the Germans prevented the ammunition being brought up; but they did it with cold steel and proved that a man can fight without ammunition if he has to.

"In Serbia they are still carrying on, although if a man is wounded on the battle front thirty miles away from Saloniki, he dies unless he can get back to his own feet because they cannot spare the men to attend his wounds and carry him back. And they are proving that it is possible to fight without medical assistance.

"But no man can fight forty-eight hours without food. The situation is such that the United States and Canada have got to feed the Allies on the other side, and must continue to feed them during the war and for some years thereafter. They and we are sitting at a common table, and all they ask for the three years of fighting before we came is their honest share. May I ask when you sit down to each meal of each day to say grace as follows:

"Here we gather, dear All-Father,
Round Thy table to be fed.
'Tis Thy gift—our daily bread.

Nations plead for daily bread—
Fighting son and anguished mother,
Orphaned children—all together
Pray to Thee for daily bread.
At Thy common table, Father,
Ask we all for daily bread.

"God, All-Father, hear our prayer!
Move our hearts and minds to share
With Thy children at Thy table
This Thy gift of daily bread—
Sacred gift of daily bread!

"Lest they perish, swift and eager
Share we now our daily bread.
Give, through us, O great All-Father
To Thy children, daily bread!"

"There is not enough for them and for us. Who is going without it? The millions who sleep in Flanders field have pledged their lives that freedom may live. We have answered with our pledge that not only shall our millions sleep beside them if need be, but through our saving the still living shall be fed. Shall we keep the faith?

"In Flanders' fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below!
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved—and now we lie
In Flanders' fields.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch—be yours to hold it high!
"If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep though poppies grow

THE SANITARY CONTROL OF FOOD PRODUCING AND DISTRIBUTING ESTABLISHMENTS.

This address was delivered before the Food Officials, in convention assembled, at Chicago, by Guy G. Frary, Food Commissioner, South Dakota.

No doubt many of the members of this organization who have attended former conventions of the body wondered, in looking over the program, why a subject so common as to be almost trite should be before us for attention this year. At this time when our thoughts are properly centered on the successful prosecution of the war and our minds are accustomed to recording, almost daily, events of world-wide significance, it is increasingly difficult for us to concentrate interest on matters which, at the moment, we may consider have bearing, or at best but slight bearing, on the war or present impelling needs. However, while we have taken from peaceful occupations and placed under arms to fight for world freedom some three millions of the best men on this round globe, we must not overlook the welfare of the ninety-seven millions of our citizens not under arms. We are a body of public employees chosen to enforce laws enacted for the well-being of the people of this country, and, though the war may bring added duties, we still must not fail in the performance of those functions assigned us as law enforcement officers.

The adulteration of food is not a thing of the past. The millennium is still far in the future and men have not forgot their cunning in contriving ways and means whereby the unsuspecting consumer, and indeed the cautious one, may be deceived. Adulteration may simply defraud the purse, or it may actually endanger health. To the majority of consumers, the word adulteration implies the presence of harmful substances; whereas, such an innocent thing as pure water has constituted and still often does constitute one of the commonest adulterants. It is with another class of adulterants that we have to deal, however, and these are the agents of disease dissemination. Microscopic in form, their detection is as difficult as their exclusion.

Sanitary control is intended to protect the public health and so may be considered in two phases: first the care of the health of the operatives in food handling plants and second, the protection of the health of the consumer of foods produced in such plants. Measures effective for one condition operate to accomplish the other end desired. You cannot take proper precautions as to the health and working condition of employees without at the same time affecting the quality of products shipped from the factory.

Three things are necessary if we are to exercise the needed sanitary control in the production and handling of food. There must be an adequate enforceable law. There must be competent inspection backed up by fearless administration; and there must be favorable public sentiment represented by a co-operative public press. With these weapons results can be attained anywhere. The law may well be worded in agreement with the model bill proposed several years ago by this body and now in force in several states. Failing to secure such a law, however, an added subdivision under the definition of adulteration in your food law, similar to that embodied in the food law of the state of Maine, can be effectively used. What this lacks in detail it makes up in comprehensiveness and the details may be left to regulations. But an effective law is absolutely necessary. Nothing permanent is accomplishd by bluff.

In sanitary control as in most other lines of regulatory work the competent inspector is indispensable. He must be tactful, intelligent, possessed of keen powers of observation, and a liberal fund of good, wholesome common sense. The inspectior must have no doubt as to the value and significance of exacting cleanliness and must realize that tiled walls and floors and elaborate fixtures do not prevent the contamination of food through the agency of diseased employees but may even serve merely as a screen behind which hide some of the most inexcusable insanitary practices. Behind the inspector must stand his superior ready to back him up in the enforcement of the law and regulations. Nothing is so helpful to a good inspector's work as a letter from the office recalling to the mind of the offender the inspector's report and notifying him of the necessity for prompt compliance with law. Don't let your inspectors' reports be filed without careful scrutiny.

Public opinion is a great asset in the enforcement of sanitary food control. Without it we are severely handicapped. Let the people know what you are doing and you will have them with you if you are conscientiously working to insure them clean and safe food. Public interest in hygiene and sanitation is undergoing a great awakening. The service rendered along the lines of factory sanitation by many large employers of labor is going to have a marked educational effect with the laboring class. Recognizing the value of sanitation in their own cases these people are going to demand the same or even greater care on the part of those persons engaged in the manufacture and distribution of their food. Coming fresh and clean from plants where ventilation, lighting, toilet facilities and personal cleanliness are all given their proper degree of credit in the attainment of maximum output, these workers are not going to be satisfied to purchase their food from a slovenly clerk or huckster. They are going to demand clean food and food can reach the consumer clean only when it is prepared in a clean factory and distributed in clean containers by clean persons. To be considered also here is the influence exerted by the increasing number of classes in domestic science maintained in our schools and colleges all over this land. These classes are composed of girls and young women who are shortly going to be the food buyers of the nation. They are being instructed in food values, food economies and in food sanitation. They are being told the danger that lurks in milk handled by unclean hands and by persons who may be carriers of typhoid or diphtheria. They are being shown why they must make sure that the cooks they shall in the future employ must be free from all communicable diseases, and are being taught why it is necessary that the factory from which their manufactured food comes must be conducted along strictly sanitary lines.

Then, most important of all factors now affecting this problem, is the army of millions of men who in training camp or at battle front are fast learning to appreciate the inestimable value of cleanliness in its fullest meaning in connection with food. Among these millions are now or soon will be some twenty thousand physicians who are receiving, as part of their training in the army, an intensive course in sanitation. Led by these medical men and a smaller number of expert food chemists and sanitarians, this vast army is coming back after the war to wield a powerful influence on all our social and economic life. Having learned the value of clean food these men will be content with nothing less for themselves and families in civil life, and it is up to those of us who are now engaged in the supervision of food manufacture and distribution to see well to it that nothing is left undone that will hasten the spread of the gospel of clean food made in clean plants, and delivered to the consumer under conditions which will insure its protection from contamination.

FOOD REGULATIONS IN WAR TIME AS COMPARED TO TIMES OF PEACE.

This address was delivered before the Chicago Convention of Food Officials by Geo. L. Flanders, New York.

We are a hundred million and over Americans living under a government of states bound together by a Constitution which is the fundamental and supreme law of the land. It is a government of conferred powers agreed to and established by the people themselves. As it stands it is the latest expression of the will of the people and has no superior except the will of the people when so expressed as to legitimately change the document. As such, it is the basis of our principles and our rights making us a coherent and hence a strong people. John Fisk says that the written constitution is a social contract between men to determine certain relations between them in civil society. It being the basis of our fundamental rights, the principles involved and set forth in it should be known and understood generally by all citizens and respected, obeyed and sustained as our civil guide or creed. As such it should not be lightly treated nor subject to spasmodic changes.

The fathers evidently had this in mind when providing how changes should be made. The method provided is such that of itself it insures careful consideration and deliberation and precludes hasty action. Lecky, in speaking of this feature of our constitution, said:

"An appetite for organic change is one of the worst diseases that can affect a nation. All real progress, all sound national development, must grow out of a stable, persistent, national character, deeply influenced by custom and precedent and old traditional reverence, habitually aiming at the removal of practical evils and the attainment of practical advantages, rather than speculative change. Institutions, like trees, can never attain their maturity or produce their proper fruits if their roots are perpetually tampered with. In no single point is the American Constitution more incontestably superior to our own than in the provisions by which it has so effectually barred the path of organic change that the appetite for such change has almost passed away."

Fisk says:

"At the time of the Revolution, when the several states framed new governments, they simply put a written constitution into the position of supremacy formerly occupied by the charter. Instead of a document expressed in terms of a royal grant, they adopted a document expressed in terms of a popular edict. To this the legislature must conform; and the people were already somewhat familiar with the method of testing the constitutionality of a law by getting the matter brought before the courts. The mental habit thus generated was probably more important than any other single circumstance in enabling our Federal Union to be formed. Without it, indeed, it would have been impossible to form a durable union. * * * We may observe that American state constitutions have altered very much in character since the first part of the present century. The earlier constitutions were confined to a general outline of the organization of the government. They did not undertake to make the laws, but to prescribe the conditions under which laws might be made and executed. Recent state constitutions enter more and more boldly upon the general work of legislation. For example, in some states they specify what kinds of property shall be exempt from seizure for debt, they make regulations as to railroad freight-charges, they prescribe sundry details of practice in the courts, or they forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors. Until recently such subjects would have been left to the legislatures; no one would have thought of putting them into a constitution. * * * There is also, no doubt, a disposition to distrust legislatures and in some measure do their work for them by direct popular enactment. For such reasons some recent state constitutions have come almost to resemble bodies of statutes. Mr. Woodrow Wilson suggestively compares this kind of popular legislation with the Swiss practice known as the referendum. * * * 'The objections to the referendum,' says Mr. Wilson, 'are, of course, that it assumes a discriminating judgment and a fulness of information on the part of the people touching questions of public policy which they do not often possess, and that it lowers the sense of responsibility on the part of legislators.' Another serious objection to our recent practice is that it tends to confuse the very valuable distinction between a constitution and a body of statutes."

Mr. Justice Strong, of the Supreme Court of the United States, said in Knox v. Lee (Legal Tender Case):

"We do not expect to find in a constitution minute details. It is necessarily brief and comprehensive. It prescribes outlines, leaving the filling up to be deduced from the outlines. In Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat., 326, it was said: 'The Constitution unavoidably deals in general language. It did not suit the purpose of the people in framing this great charter of our liberties to provide for minute specifications of its powers, or to declare the means by which those powers should be carried into execution.'

Chief Justice Marshall in McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat., 405, states: "A Constitution, to contain an accurate detail of all the subdivisions of which its great powers will admit, and of all the means by which it may be carried into execution, would partake of the prolixity of a political code, and would scarcely be embraced by the human mind. It would probably never be understood by the public. Its nature, therefore, requires that only its great outlines should be marked, its important objects designated, and the minor ingredients which compose those objects be deduced from the nature of the objects themselves."

The government of the United States is acknowledged by all to be one of enumerated powers, from which it necessarily follows that powers not granted cannot be exercised.

With the above in view, I call your attention to the provisions of Paragraph 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, which is composed of eighteen subdivisions in which the powers granted to the United States Government are enumerated. Subdivision 3 of the enumerated powers provides that Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and the Indian tribes. When national food legislation was contemplated one of the first inquiries was: To what extent can the National government go in regulating the manufacture, sale or distribution for sale of food products? It was concluded that the only power delegated to the National government under which it could so regulate was subdivision 3, above referred to, consequently the National law was enacted providing for the regulation of the sale of food products in interstate commerce and not extending it to the internal or intrastate commerce. This was left for legislation by the states. You remember that when the National Act was passed the impression prevailed in some quarters that that legislation superseded state legislation and made state legislation unnecessary. It soon, however, came to be understood that it had its special field, to wit: the National Law its field in controlling interstate and international trade and trade in the territories and the District of Columbia, and that State legislation covered the internal traffic within the state. This question has all been discussed before this body to such an extent that it is not necessary to make further mention of it.

When the United States declared that a state of war existed between Germany and the United States it thus opened up a new field for legislative and administrative action in relation to food and food products, namely, the exercise of the powers by the National Government in relation to said products to such extent as might be permitted by the Constitution in the powers therein conferred in addition to the powers to regulate commerce; such powers being known as War Powers. These powers are set forth in the following subdivisions of Section 8, Article 1, of the Constitution:

10. To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the High Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;

11. To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water;

12. To raise and support Armies, but no Appropriation of Money to that Use shall be for a longer Term than two Years;

13. To provide and maintain a Navy;

14. To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval forces;

15. To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;

16. To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining, the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

17. * * *

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Subdivision 1 of said section provides:

1. The Congress shall have Power to lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common defense and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

It is to be noted that nowhere in the provisions above quoted is there any specific statement made or power given in relation to food, but that Subdivison 18 gives general power to do the things necessary for carrying into execution any of the foregoing powers. In the legal tender cases Mr. Chief Justice Marshall is quoted as saying in Martin v. Hunter:

"The Government of the United States can claim no powers which are not granted to it by the Constitution, and the powers actually granted must be such as are expressly given or given by necessary implication."

"This implication, it is true, may follow from the grant of several express powers, as well as from one alone, but the power implied must, in all cases, be subsidiary to the execution of the powers expressed."

"The interpretation given by Mr. Hamilton was substantially followed by Chief Justice Marshall in McCulloch v. Maryland, when, speaking for the court, he said that if the end to be accomplished by the legislation of Congress be legitimate, and within the scope of the Constitution, 'all the means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, and which are not prohibited, but are consistent with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional.' The Chief Justice did not, it is true, in terms declare that legislation which is not thus appropriate, and plainly adapted to a lawful end, is unconstitutional, but such is the plain import of the argument advanced by him; and that conclusion must also follow from the principle that, when legislation of a particular character is specially authorized, the opposite of such legislation is inhibited."

To illustrate: Under the powers granted the government may act anywhere within the scope of the powers in the United States, for instance, the power to coin money is not restricted and the money can be used anywhere in the United States; the power to establish postoffices and post routes is a general power and the government establishes postoffices within the state and anywhere within the United States for the purpose of distribution of the mails. There is, however, as heretofore stated, no express power granted by the Constitution as to specific legislation relative to food products, therefore, the power to legislate relative to food products—if it exists at all—must exist by implication or as a power necessary for carrying into execution some of the powers specifically granted. Such powers were under discussion in the legal tender case and in an opinion—though one dissenting from the exercise of the powers that were exercised in the case under consideration—Mr. Justice Clifford said:

"Money is, undoubtedly, the sinews of war, but the power to raise money to carry on war, under the Constitution, is not an implied power, and whoever adopts that theory commits a great constitutional error. Congress may declare war and Congress may appropriate all moneys in the Treasury to carry on the war, or Congress may coin money for that purpose, or borrow money to any amount for the same purpose, or Congress may lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises to replenish the treasury, or may dispose of the public lands or other property belonging to the United States, and may in fact, by the exercise of the express powers of the Constitution, command the whole wealth and substance of the people to sustain the public credit and prosecute the war to a successful termination."

In the same opinion Justice Clifford says:

"Powers not granted cannot be exercised by Congress, and certainly all must agree that no powers are granted except what are expressed or such as are fairly applicable as requisite means to attain the end of a power which is granted, or, in other words, are necessary and proper to carry those which are expressed into execution."

The exercise of a power to insure proper production and distribution of food products in time of war can scarcely be classed as not necessary to the proper exercise of the power granted to declare and carry on war. The exercise of such a power is not only necessary but may be vitally necessary to the continued existence of the government. As such, it undoubtedly falls fairly within the provisions of Subdivision 18 of Section 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution as being a power necessary to the execution of one of the conferred powers and, if it be so, it is one of the powers the proper exercise of which may be vital to the life of the nation.

As to the question of implied powers, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in Martin v. Hunter, said:

"This implication, it is true, may follow from the grant of several express powers, as well as from one alone, but the power implied must, in all cases, be subsidiary to the execution of the powers expressed."

As to the question of food legislation applying to the internal affairs of the state during war time, there can be no question but what the exercise of the power of the national government is subsidiary to the powers granted to make war and it is a power necessary to the continued existence of the government.

Mr. Chief Justice Strong, who wrote the prevailing opinion in the legal tender cases stated:

"It is impossible to know what those non-enumerated powers are, and what is their nature and extent, without considering the purposes they were intended to subserve. Those purposes, it must be noted, reach beyond the mere execution of all powers definitely intrusted to Congress and mentioned in detail. They embrace the execution of all other powers vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof. It certainly was intended to confer upon the government the power of self-preservation. * * * It is not indispensable to the existence of any power claimed for the Federal Government that it can be found specified in the words of the Constitution, or clearly and directly traceable to some one of the specified powers. Its existence may be deduced fairly from more than one of the substantive powers expressly defined, or from them all combined. It is allowable to group together any number of them and infer from them all that the power claimed has been conferred. Such a treatment of the Constitution is recognized by its own provisions. * * * A Constitution is framed for ages to come, and is designed to approach immortality as near as mortality can approach it. Its course cannot always be tranquil. It is exposed to storms and tempests, and its framers must be unwise statesmen indeed, if they have not provided it, as far as its nature will permit, with the means of self-preservation from the perils it is sure to encounter."

From the above quotation the conclusion seems to be irresistible that the Federal government has in time of war the power to enact laws to control the production and sale of food products within the states or territories of the United States and that such laws will take precedence over any enactments with which they are in conflict. We can also conclude that as this is a war power or measure, that when the war is closed and the country is again on a peace basis that such power so conferred by the National legislation will cease and that the legal and constitutional powers appertaining to peace times will again prevail. This should be impressed upon the mind of the layman so as not to permit the view to become general that because the Government in time of war can enact necessary drastic legislation that it can do so in times of peace.

THE WAR'S EFFECT UPON THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.*

BY E. DAVENPORT, ILL.

The following address was delivered before the Chicago Convention of Food Officials:

I certainly appreciate the honor of being invited to speak before a body of officials upon so important a subject as "The Effect of the War Upon the Dairy Industry."

I have the decided feeling that some man in active dairy business could have been more successful in outlining what the effects are likely to be. However, as no man is competent to do more than prophesy at this juncture, and as no man can cover more than a portion of so large a field, I am more than glad to outline for your consideration some of the influences likely to be exerted by the war with more or less permanent effect upon the dairy industry.

1. The Value of Milk as Food. Say what we please, the world has never regarded milk as a real and staple food except for babies and invalids; whereas, it is the cheapest of all our animal foods, and can be consumed in large quantities, both directly and indirectly, as milk, butter, cheese, cream, buttermilk, koumiss, ice cream, condensed milk, milk powder—in brief in more different forms than any other standard food except flour. Not only that, but in any form, milk and its derivatives are as standard as flour or meat, and for adults as well as children. The world little realizes the proportion of its diet that actually comes from the cow, but this realization is almost certain to deepen as the war goes on.

2. The Indispensability of Milk. Not only will the food value of milk become better understood, but its indispensability will become better established every day as the role of the vitamins comes to be better understood. I believe we are now seeing the last of the foolishness of economizing on the use of milk, while indulging freely in substitutes that are not only more costly but less nutritious than the real article.

3. The Cost of City Milk. Most of us in this new country have been brought up in the habit of consuming milk directly from the cow, or at most of running over to the neighbors with our little pail morning and evening after the family supply. Under these conditions milk has been cheap, so cheap as hardly to count in the expense budget. Only recently has the cost of city delivery begun to attract attention, and still more recently the increased expense of production, by reason of better housing, better care, and more costly feed. All these elements of expense will be exaggerated by the war, and the public will come rapidly to understand why it is that milk costs more than it did on the farm in pioneer times when the cows ran in the road and fed on the public domain.

4. A Just Compensation. With this knowledge will come a willingness to agree to a just compensation both to producer and to distributor, and while differences will need to be adjusted from time to time, the absurd milk war of last year will hardly be repeated, particularly as the actual elements of cost are now so well understood by reason of the cost-accounting methods introduced by the different experiment stations.

5. The Good Cow. With increasing cost of production, the inherent value of the good cow will be made to stand out as never before. With cheap food we esteemed her as a heavy producer, but with costly feed she will be recognized as an economical producer, which is still more to the point.

6. The Folly of Forced Feeding. The law of diminishing returns applies to all feeding operations as well as to mechanical power. By this economists understand that beyond a certain point additions to expense, as feed, fertilizer, or other outlay, are not followed by equal additions to results. We have been taught that the cow requires a certain amount of feed for maintenance and that all above that amount goes into milk. But we now know that as she nears her full capacity the later pounds are made at an extreme outlay of food. With this knowledge we shall crowd some of our cows less heavily.

7. Economize on Costly Boughten Food. The only cow feed that should be bought is that which is procured as a by-product of our milling operations. It is ruinous to make milk from boughten feed that could be raised upon the farm, and it is equally ruinous to so compete for the limited supply of mill feeds as to force the price to an abnormal figure, as was done last winter. When a by-product, because of the demand, becomes more costly than standard farm-raised feeds equally good for milk production, the time has come to call a halt in the demand, because feeds are valuable for milk production not in proportion to their cost but in proportion to their nutriments.

8. Tiding Over Difficulties. The lesson of last winter will not soon be forgotten, for by it we learned that the best way to tide over a temporary difficulty is by shortening the feed, especially that portion which is boughten. The yield shortens too, to be sure, but that is often necessary when the public is fighting milk, and it is far better to cut down temporarily the amount of feed in the whole herd than to sell a portion of the herd and go on stuffing the remainder with more feed than is profitable.

9. Dairying a Part of Farming. That dairying is a part of real farming and not a highly specialized and distinct industry is being demonstrated by war conditions, for by as much as the dairyman has supported his herd by feed that he could have produced but did not, by that much he has failed. All cost-accounting studies show that a dairy in order to succeed must be a part of a farm and not an independent institution like a shoe factory.

10. War Will Stabilize Dairying. War conditions simply intensify economic strain and emphasize demands. This will operate rapidly to standardize both the product and the methods of production, all of which will greatly stabilize the business. The old fight will also be settled along rational lines. The value and the cost of milk will become recognized and dairying will rapidly emerge from among the hazardous enterprises where it of necessity lingers under new country conditions.

11. A World Market. Almost of necessity we shall hold a large share of the world market which we gain by the war. I cannot share the common feeling that we shall have a large and continuous call for breeding stock after the war, though at first and for a time there is sure to be a sharp and profitable demand. The farms will become restocked very rapidly, and our active market for breeders, it seems to me, will soon dwindle. Not so for condensed milk, butter, cheese and, I should hope, also milk powder, which I have found in camping to be a cheap and desirable product.

12. The Veal Calf. The war ought to help greatly in establishing the legitimacy of the veal calf business. It is the unthinking consumer and the soap-box politician that make the sweeping indictment against veal. These will be largely educated or otherwise induced to shut up, for a large proportion of the young dairy herd ought never to be raised to maturity. This economic fact is likely to percolate rapidly now, as well as the corresponding fact that an animal never makes meat so rapidly or so cheaply as when it is young.

These are some of the more obvious results the war is likely to bring to the dairy business. Others will be added which do not now seem so clear, but of one large fact we may be certain—the older the country, the more established will be the dairy business, and our country is taking on age just now with astonishing rapidity.

SKETCH OF W. A. MILNE.

"Winning the War" was the title of the address given by W. A. Milne before the Association of American Dairy Food and Drug Officials at the twenty-second annual convention in Chicago. Mr. Milne spoke at the association dinner Thursday evening, August 29.

Mr. Milne has been a member of the staff of the U. S. Food Administration for the past nine months, and his work for some time has been the directing of the speakers sent out by this branch of the Government all over the country and abroad. He has, therefore, had a splendid opportunity to study war conditions.

Mr. Milne was born in Chicago, is a graduate of Toronto University and the Northwestern Law School. After graduation he entered the bond and investment business in Chicago, later locating in Seattle in the same business. During a moose-hunting expedition in Northern Alberta in 1911 which carried him all over the wilds of the Peace River basin and by canoe and steamer over two thousand miles of inland waterways, he became impressed with the development opportunities of Alberta. The result was that he was offered and accepted the post of Director of Colonization of Alberta. During the next four years, 100,000 people settled in Alberta, drawn there by unique colonization methods.

Realizing that lying and misrepresentation on the part of unscrupulous land agents were seriously retarding progress, he began in 1912, a national campaign to amend the criminal code of Canada making false advertising punishable by heavy fine and imprisonment. During that campaign he traveled over eight thousand miles, addressed over three hundred mass meetings, sent out over one hundred thousand letters, collected evidences of fraud and presented his case to the Minister of Justice and to the Dominion Parliament, backed by thousands of telegrams from the leading business men of Canada. In spite of the most strenuous opposition from vested interests, he had the satisfaction of seeing the amendment passed in 1913.

At the outbreak of the war he was abroad and remained there for some months until it became apparent that the war would be a long one and that European emigration would be impossible until peace was declared. Returning to the United States he engaged in organization work with the Chamber of Commerce until we entered the war. He was then called upon to serve the government and has since visited twenty-two states, filling speaking engagements and doing organization work. For the past five months, he has been constantly in Washington in the office of the Food Administration.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MILK REGULATIONS WITH INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

JOHN B. NEWMAN, Chairman.

Made to the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials, August 28, 1918, at the Twenty-second Annual Convention, Chicago, Ill.

Some outstanding features in which milk claims distinction over all other foods are as follows:

It is the most valuable and the most economical of all foods from a nutritional standpoint.

It is, perhaps, the most frequently subjected to careless methods in the various stages from production to consumption.

It is the most easily contaminated of all foods.

It has come to our attention with special emphasis of late that milk has gained distinction in still another respect—

IT IS THE MOST REGULATED OF ALL FOODS.

Official investigations have established that the dairy industry is handicapped by a multiplicity of over-lapping, non-essential and uneconomic rules and regulations. Many city control officials seemingly have proceeded on the assumption that the way to make milk safest is through the issuance of voluminous regulations, the longer the list of regulations, the safer will be the supply. We do not dispute the fact that milk is the most easily contaminated of our foods when proper methods are ignored, but this does not furnish sufficient excuse for the issuance of regulations that place an unjust burden on the dairymen without contributing materially to the improvement of the supply.

This over-regulation can be traced principally to two sources:

1. Inexperience and short-sightedness of officials ignorant of the fundamentals in the situation.
2. The maintaining in effect of obsolete rules and regulations no longer compatible with the progress of the times.

In the first case, these inexperienced officials have weighed down the dairyman with unessential and uneconomic regulations and in their misguided efforts have failed to realize the ultimate effect of such regulations on the milk supply and on its price to the consumer. If no other recourse was available, such a policy might escape criticism. However, the facts are that this unwise, over-regulation, largely experimental in nature, has been undertaken by persons of inexperience in the work they have taken up, who have ignored standards already existing and who have failed to appreciate and avail themselves of information collected by trained specialists who have made the subject their life-long study.

Most of the regulations by which adequate protection can be afforded the municipal milk supply as proved by checked investigations, are grouped upon a few, simple, concise facts. In this respect a study of the U. S. Department of Agriculture Bulletin 642, will be of great value and of special interest to food officials, health officers, sanitarians and dairy instructors.

This bulletin shows that the three most essential factors in the production of milk of low bacterial content are, in the order named:

1. STERILIZED UTENSILS.
2. CLEAN COWS WITH CLEAN UDDERS.
3. USE OF THE SMALL-TOP PAIL.

The practical value of these essential factors was proved by using them on six average dairy farms.

And, further, to quote from the same bulletin:

> "The results of the experiments indicate that it is possible for the average dairyman on the average farm, without expensive barns and equipment, to produce milk (practically free from visible dirt) which when fresh has a low bacterial count. By the use of the three simple factors, namely, sterilized utensils, clean cows with clean udders and teats, and the small-top pail, it should be possible on the average farm to produce milk which corresponds closely to milk as it leaves the udder of the cow. A fourth factor, of holding the milk as near 10 degrees Centergrade (50 degrees Fahrenheit) as possible, is also absolutely necessary."

In his pamphlet entitled "Safeguarding Nature's Most Valuable Food—Milk," prepared for the New York Milk Committee, Dr. Charles E. North presents some exceedingly valuable information worthy of the closest attention in considering the fundamental principles for providing safe milk. He says:

> "DECENCY DISTINGUISHES HUMANS FROM ANIMALS.
> "DECENCY ADDS PLEASURE AND APPETITE TO FOOD.
> "CLEANLINESS CONTRIBUTES MOST TO DECENCY.
> "MILK MAY BE SAFE BECAUSE IT IS BOILED BUT MAY BE INDECENT BECAUSE IT IS FILTHY."

Experience has demonstrated that the farmer is often mislead in the belief that pasteurization is a panacea for all evils, and unless the sentiment and real meaning in Dr. North's maxims are grasped and followed out, the value of pasteurization will have been greatly discounted and we shall still come far short of approaching our ideal in the municipal milk supply.

Pasteurization, we all agree is a very necessary operation in protecting the supply. In our set of regulations we are on record as favoring it as indispensable to the situation, but to place entire dependence upon it to the exclusion of other precautions is to greatly overestimate its benefit. Common sense; common decency if nothing else, should dictate to the producer the need of complying with so simple a regulation as keeping filth out of milk.

In the second case previously cited, many of these regulations referred to as non-essential and uneconomic, were framed and adopted by officials of the old school who at the time of their activities had not the opportunity to avail themselves of the practical knowledge such as is possessed by Dr. W. A. Evans, Dr. North, and well-posted municipal control officials of their type who have done wonderful work in late years to safeguard the city milk supply through their intimate and practical knowledge of all factors of the situation and through their ability to discriminate between the efficient and inefficient factors entering into milk control. Many of these officials of the old school were no doubt abreast of the times in which they lived, but in the last decade or two wonderful progress has been made changing many of our views, theories and practices as related to the milk supply. The fact, however, confronts us that these obsolete regulations remain on our law books in many of our towns and cities and that little or no effort has been made to supplant them with sane, practical and more up-to-date measures. It is my personal opinion that a good deal of this trouble could probably be avoided or eliminated if sufficient compensation were paid by these municipalities to secure officials more competent to cope with the matter in hand.

In arriving at a successful solution of what kind of legal control measures and how many should be employed, we can do well to study the milk problem from the health, nutritional and economic standpoint, with due consideration to the probable effect of any action taken on each one of these phases which enter into the situation.

Scientific research in recent years had added greatly, also, to our store of knowledge relating to the food value of milk. Besides protein, fat, carbohydrates and minerals which it contains in well-balanced proportion, it has been proved that milk is a growth-promoting, health-maintaining and protective food. The research and experimental work of Dr. E. V. McCollum, of the John Rockefeller Scientific Institute, extending over a period of many years, has given to the world a wonderful and true story concerning the vital principles in milk, more than ever proving its right to the title of the elixir of life.

> "Dairying is often referred to as the back-bone of agriculture. Agriculture depends for the best use of its roughage and for soil fertility on the dairy cow more than for anything else.
> "Every day the people of the United States use thirty million quarts of milk, as milk and cream, in addition to condensed milk, butter and cheese.
> "The milk industry is one of the giant industries. It is close to the pocketbook of practically every farmer and close to the health of every consumer."

Milk being the greatest of all foods and the dairy industry indispensable to our agricultural prosperity and efficiency, it is clearly the duty of the control official not only to adopt measures that will insure a safe supply, but also to make this supply available for consumption to the greatest extent by practical co-operation with the producer. And in this connection we have arrived at the point where it is recognized that the enforcement of overlapping, non-essential and uneconomic regulations works a great deal more of harm than good, this rule applying alike to producer and consumer. Such an unwise policy can do naught but force a certain percentage of the dairymen out of business, bringing about a consequent decrease in the supply. Increased prices follow, making it a hardship, or even an impossibility for the very persons who most need the product to obtain it. Such a deplorable condition has already been experienced in many parts of our country. There are cases where consumers have tried to do without milk and who have tried feeding substitutes to their babies and children. Detriment to health and promotion of inefficiency have invariably been found to result. Within the past year we have witnessed the commendable efforts of regional milk commissions in different states to harmonize the different classes in the milk industry to the end that we shall have an adequate supply within the reach of all, particularly the poorer classes.

The fallacy and illogic that exist in the enforcement or attempted enforcement of these multitudinous and variant milk rules and regulations is strikingly brought out by the investigation conducted by the Massachusetts Health Department. The report of this body shows—

> In sixty cities in that state, there existed 800 regulations for the municipal milk supply.
> In seven Vermont cities, where there was dairy inspection, 143 different regulations pertaining to dairies were found, of which only one regulation was common to six of the cities, and three common to five of the cities.
> About 50 of these regulations were individual in character; that is, not included in the regulations of any of the other cities.

Serious consideration was given to this problem by investigations conducted by the American Public Health Association, the Central Atlantic Food and Drug Officials Association, the New England Dairy, Food and Drug Officials, and other bodies.

An extensive discussion of these conditions was taken up by the members of the International Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors at their Fifth Annual Meeting held at Springfield, Mass., in October, 1916. This meeting resulted in the appointment of a committee, consisting of Ernest Kelley of the Market Milk Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture; George S. Hine, Dairy Commissioner of Kansas, and myself, the purpose being to investigate the matter and get up a set of regulations—the minimum number that would accomplish the desired result; namely, to afford adequate protection and the surest protection to our milk supply without placing an unjust burden on those engaged in its production that its consumption might be made available to the largest number of consumers at the lowest possible price consistent with safety. In addition we were to try to co-operate with other similar associations with a view of securing uniformity in the regulations, and to get as many of the associations as possible behind one set of regulations.

Later, the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials appointed a committee consisting of J. J. Higgins, Food and Dairy Commissioner of the State of Washington; W. B. Barney, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Iowa, and myself, to work with the other committee.

I had the good fortune of having been present at the meeting in Springfield, Mass., and at the New England Commissioners' meeting at Worcester. The other members have likewise profited in knowledge by their attendance at similar meetings and all have made a special study of the subject for years. I assure you that our committee has gone into the matter thoroughly and has given careful consideration to formulating a set of regulations in our opinion adequate and suitable from the broadest point of view for the protection of the milk supply. Special attention has been paid to retaining only those regulations essential to the purpose and those found most suitable for uniform application. Such a course we believe to be imperative at this time to best meet the problem. Unless sane and practical means are adopted and put into effect, we face the probability or direful consequences resulting from scarcity, high prices and much hardship which must inevitably follow a reduction in the supply.

I am now presenting to you the report of the acting committee for the committee appointed by the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials and instructed to draw up a set of regulations most adaptable to uniform application in order to insure a safe and clean milk supply. This report is submitted to you by Mr. Barney and myself as Mr. Higgins is no longer Commissioner of the State of Washington. Our report is the same as the one made to the International Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors. Some remarks by Mr. Barney are also appended.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MILK REGULATIONS.

Your committee wishes to state it has no intention to cover the whole broad field of milk control, but simply to define and set forth as briefly as possible the regulations regarded as fundamentally essential to safe milk from a practical standpoint. It has been our aim to eliminate the non-essential ones in order to avoid as far as possible placing unnecessary burdens on the dairyman, while retaining those that contribute materially to a safe supply. At the same time those factors which have a well-defined beneficial effect on milk quality must be maintained in effect even though they may result in additional costs which ultimately must be borne by the consumer as his share of the national health insurance.

RULES FOR PRODUCTION.

1. Every dairy producing market milk should be licensed by the city or State so that a complete record may be kept.

2. Cattle should be healthy as determined by the tuberculin test and a physical examination by a competent veterinarian. They should be tested at least once a year and where reactors are found they should be removed and retest conducted within six months. If the milk is to be properly pasteurized, the physical examination may suffice, but the committee wishes to affirm its belief in the economic and sanitary importance of the tuberculin test. Milk should be unsalable from cows within fifteen days before calving and as long thereafter as the milk is abnormal.

3. All persons engaged in the production of milk should be free from communicable disease and from contact with any such disease. Medical examination of employees is advised where feasible.

4. Every operator of a dairy farm should, within twenty-four hours, notify the health department having jurisdiction over his milk, of the presence of any communicable disease on his farm or among the milk handlers.

5. The water supply on premises where milk is produced should be abundant and protected from contamination. It should be free from any disease-producing organisms.

6. Privies on dairy farms should be fly-proof, and provided with a water-tight receptacle for the excreta. The excreta should be removed frequently and buried at least two feet deep where it cannot contaminate the water supply.

7. Cows should be clean. They should be free from accumulations of dirt and their udders and flanks should be wiped with a clean, damp cloth just previous to milking.

8. Milking should be done with clean, dry hands or with a properly sterilized mechanical milker. Milkers should wear clean clothing at time of milking.

9. Some type of small-top milking pail should be used.

10. Milk should be removed as soon as drawn, to a clean place, strained through a new cotton or other clean, efficient strainer, and be cooled within one hour to 50 degrees Fahrenheit or less. It should be kept covered and be held below 50 degrees Fahrenheit at all times.

11. All utensils which come in contact with milk should be thoroughly washed and sterilized for at least five minutes with steam or boiling water. They should be kept inverted and should be protected from contamination at all times.

RULES FOR TRANSPORTATION.

During transportation from farm to city, milk should be kept free from contamination and should be held at or below 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

RULES FOR HANDLING AND DELIVERY.

1. All persons engaged in the sale of milk should be licensed by the State or city in which they conduct their business.

2. All persons engaged in the handling or delivery of milk should be free from communicable diseases and from contact with such diseases. The operator of any milk plant should immediately advise the health department of the presence of any such diseases among his employees or in their homes.

3. The water supply of all establishments where milk is handled should be pure and free from disease-producing organisms.

4. Proper toilet facilities should be provided for all employees, together with wash bowl, soap and towel for the cleansing of hands.

5. Where pasteurization is performed, a temperature of approximately 145, and never less than 142 degrees Fahrenheit should be maintained for at least thirty minutes.

6. All machinery, cans, bottles, etc., with which milk comes in contact should be thoroughly washed and sterilized with steam or boiling water; and they should be protected from contamination at all times.

7. At all times, except during pasteurization, milk should be held at or below 50 degrees Fahrenheit until delivered to the consumer.

8. Milk should be delivered to the consumer only in bottles or sealed cans.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

PRODUCTION.

Your committee wishes to emphatically state that many things are desirable in the production and handling of milk that may not greatly affect the bacteria count. Common decency, economy and the esthetic effect on the buyer demand close attention on the part of the dairyman to many details regarding which it may not be advisable to legislate. Such things as clean stables, whitewashing, bedding, etc., come in this category. The comfort and health of the herd depend to certain extent on clean, light, airy quarters and abundant, wholesome food and water.

In view of these facts your committee considers that a system is advisable, which combines sanitary inspections and laboratory examinations. Practical experience has shown that the dairy score card offers the most useful medium for sanitary inspection, because it serves as a guide to both inspector and inspected. We therefore urge the continued use of a uniform standard score card based on the fundamentals of dairy sanitation.

TRANSPORTATION.

It is recommended that covered platforms be maintained for the protection of milk awaiting shipment. Milk should be shipped in refrigerator cars, or in special jacketed cans which will maintain low temperatures. Cans of milk should be sealed at the farm to prevent tampering enroute.

HANDLING AND DELIVERY.

Your committee is of the opinion that the proper pasteurization of milk provides an additional safeguard without any appreciable disadvantages and is necessary with all milk except certain special classes; and it is probably advisable with those. Automatic temperature controls and recording devices are recommended.

We recommend that no dipped milk be sold either from stores or wagons. We further recommend that milk bottles be capped by machine and that the mouths of the bottles be protected by a covering.

Repasteurization of milk is undesirable.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN B. NEWMAN,
W. B. BARNEY.

In connection with his approval of these regulations, Mr. Barney makes the following supplementary remarks:

> "It appears to me that the part covering the tuberculin test is a little bit drastic and if any regulation of this kind is put in, it should cover a period of a year or so to give the dairymen a chance to make their test.
> "I think, too, that the second test should not be made until not less than sixty days after the first. It has been my experience that you can easily put a lot of milkmen out of business by being too drastic in requiring the tuberculin test.
> "Another thing that I would criticize is that the word 'shall' should be inserted in place of 'should' in many paragraphs. For illustration, paragraph 8, 'Milking should be done with clean, dry hands.' This should read 'Milking shall be done with clean, dry hands.' Besides these, the regulations are satisfactory.
> W. B. BARNEY, Commissioner.

In closing, I might say in reference to Mr. Barney's remarks that I fully agree with him that the word "shall" should be substituted for "should" in the foregoing regulations when these shall have been finally agreed upon. In the present draft, however, the regulations are submitted to you in the form of recommendations of the committee to be acted upon by this Association, and then if deemed worthy of adoption to be drafted in approved legal form.

As for the tuberculin test, which Mr. Barney holds a little drastic, I hope you will find the present moment an opportune one for expressing your opinion on this subject, and we shall also be glad to hear from you now on all phases of the subject under consideration.
